Bandits Pull $1.5 Million Robbery at du Pont Mansion

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Five armed bandits raided the palatial seaside estate of Willis Harrington du Pont early today, bound the family and servants and looted the house of $1.5 million Russian coin collection and some $34,000 worth of jewelry and cash.

Du Pont said the bandits told him they would hold the rare coin collection for $200,000 ransom. He at first estimated the worth of the collection at $500,000 but later increased the value.

Police said the men, all wearing cloth masks and gloves, entered the 33-room mansion through a back door at 12:15 a.m.

"They tied us up and threatened us as I guess all robbers do," Du Pont said. "But they didn't treat us roughly."

Du Pont, 31, said the family was upstairs when the men entered the house. "They woke us, tied us and started ransacking the house," he said. "I think they were basically after cash."

Capt. C. O. Huttoe, head of the police department's robbery detail, said the bandits used neckties to bind Du Pont, his wife, Miren, 29, and their 4-year-old son, Victor.

The three were herded into a bedroom along with the butler, Hans Hein, 55, and his wife, Rose, 50.

Du Pont said the robbers demanded the coin collection after they found 1,000 silver dollars in his safe, which he said he opened after being threatened.

"They figured I was a coin collector, I guess," he said.

In addition to the coin collection and the silver dollars, he said the robbers took five watches worth $5,000, some of Mrs. Du Pont's jewelry and an undetermined amount of cash.

After ransacking the house for two hours Du Pont said the men drove off in his 1967 Cadillac. He said the butler worked his hands free 20 minutes later and called police.

Du Pont found a $10,000 bill on the floor after the thieves fled and surmised they had either dropped it accidentally or discarded it on the theory it would be too hard to cash.

Huttoe said Du Pont told him the men were polite and used no excessive force although they did use "bad grammar."

During their stay in the house, Du Pont said the bandits helped themselves to a roast in the refrigerator and to a few bottles of soft drinks.

Du Pont said one of the bandits told him, "This is my first day on the job." He said the gang's leader asked the name of his attorney so he could contact him about exchanging the coin collection for $200,000.

The car in which the men fled was found a short time later in a church parking lot near the five acre estate where Du Pont built his $800,000 home Baymere, in 1964. The house faces Biscayne Bay in Miami's swank Coconut Grove section.

Du Pont, a trim, balding 6-footer, is the son of the late Lammot du Pont, president of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., Wilmington, Del. His wife is the former Miren K. de Anezola of Bilboa, Spain.

Du Pont holds ranching, aviation and citrus interests in Florida and is a prominent member of Miami's social set.

Yastrzemski Gives Boston 1-0 Lead

BOSTON (AP) - Carl Yastrzemski staked Boston to a 1-0 lead through the first 5 innings of today's second World Series game as the Red Sox sought to avenge Wednesday's 2-1 defeat at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals.

After drawing a walk in the first inning, Yastrzemski lined a drive into the right field seats for his first hit of the series leading off the bottom of the fourth inning.

St. Louis, meanwhile, was held hitless. Boston pitching ace Jim Lonborg retired the first 15 Cardinals in order.

Yastrzemski's homer was only the second hit off St. Louis rookie Dick Hughes. However, George Scott followed with a single and Jerry Adair beat out an infield hit before the fourth inning ended on a brilliant diving stop of Elston Howard's bid for a base-hit by Cardinal second baseman Julian Javier, who tossed to shortstop Dal Maxvill to force Adair at second and retire the side.

Longborg compiled a 22-9 regular season record.

Hughes, 29, who spent nine years banging around the Cardinals farm system before he finally made it this year as a rookie, took a 16-6 regular season record into his first Series start.

Manager Red Schoendienst made no changes in his Cardinal line-up, except for Hughes. The Red Birds became 3-1 favorites in the Series after winning the opener 2-1 on Bob Gibson's six-hit performance.

The lineups for today's game:

ST. LOUIS		BOSTON
Brock lf		Adair 2b

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) ---- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reappointed two members to the Missouri State Council on the Arts Wednesday.

They are Mrs. Marshall Craig, Sikeston, and Carl Burkel, Jefferson City. They will serve through Oct. 13, 1972.

Mrs. Craig has served one two-year term.

Senate Approves Antipoverty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed Thursday a $4,658,000,000 two-year extension of the antipoverty program.

The vote was 60 to 21.

Final action came after 11 days of Senate debate and a decision to strip from the measure a $2.8 billion emergency job program which its advocates said offered the best promise of fighting poverty.

The bill was sent to the House where the Education and Labor Committee has been struggling with a similar measure. Administration leaders conceded it faced a bitter fight there.

The final Senate version authorized $2,258,000,000 for the antipoverty programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity in the current year and $2.4 billion in fiscal 1969 starting next July 1.

The total for the current year is $198 million more than the $2.06 billion asked by President Johnson.

The Senate refused on a 50-36 vote earlier Thursday to cut this $198 million out of the measure.

The bill, once it is signed into law, still must be followed by an appropriation for the present fiscal year.

The bill represents a complete rewriting of all of the important sections of the OEO act by a Senate Labor subcommittee which has conducted a comprehensive study of the program lasting several months.

However, all of the present antipoverty projects would be funded by the bill including the Job Corps, the Neighborhood Youths Corps, Community Action which covers such programs as Head Start for preschool children, rural loans and aid to migrant workers, assistance for small business in poverty-stricken areas, work training programs for welfare recipients, and the VISTA program (Volunteers in Service To America).

Woman Goes on Spree With $19,000 Error

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Investigators say a suburban housewife took a $19,065 check issued in error by a county computer and promptly spent the money in one big, wonderful weekend in Las Vegas.

Jaynee Shearer, 37, was jailed on a grand theft charge and released Wednesday night on $1,100 bail.

Since 1963 she has received $15 a week in child support from a former husband now living in Atlanta, Ga. The man sent the money to Los Angeles court trustees, and the county issued $15 warrants to Mrs. Shearer.

Here is how the affair was described by investigators:

The $19,065 was delivered to her home in suburban Montebello on Sept. 27, and investigators say Mrs. Shearer took it to her bank immediately.

There she cashed it, investigators said, drawing cashier's

Items Taken From House

A 12-gauge Stevenson shotgun, several coins and clothing valued together at $187.17 were reported stolen Wednesday night from the O. W. Krapf residence at 843 Lora.

Investigating officer Sgt. Thurman Burns Jr. reported that the house apparently was entered through an unlocked door from the carport leading to the kitchen.

The theft occurred between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Wednesday Krapf told police.

Cabinets in the kitchen had been ransacked, but the items missing were taken from a bedroom on the southeast corner of the house, police said.

Among the coins taken were 12 silver dollars, 20 Kennedy half dollars and 22 Indian head pennies. Police are investigating.

A car driven by James H. Marshall, 65, 322 Luther, struck the rear of an automobile driven by Donna Ray, 17, 401 Missouri at 3:50 p.m. Wednesday on West Malone in front of Cream Castle, 801 West Malone police reported. Miss Ray had stopped to make a left turn prior to the accident. No one was injured.

Police received a report early today that a woman living in the 300 block of Bynum had received some annoying phone calls.

Herbert C. Reno, 138 North West St., was charged by police at 7 p.m. Wednesday with public intoxication on East Malone.

Tom Ancell Gross, Sikeston, who was arrested early Tuesday and charged with public intoxication also was charged with escaping custody. Gross had been working as a trustee in early September following an arrest on a public intoxication charge and walked away.

Curtain to Rise on 'The Man Who Came to Dinner'

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" a zany comedy about a man who slips on the steps at the house to which he was invited for dinner and stays for a month, is the first season offering of the Sikeston Little Theatre at 8 p.m. Friday in the junior high school. It will be presented again at the same time Saturday.

The three-act comedy was written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman.

Action centers on Sheridan Whitside, a critic, with, playwright, and radio commentator, who takes over the Ernest Stanley residence after his accident.

Richard Fussell, a teacher in vocational education, plays Whiteside.

So completely is the takeover, that Lynn Colley as Ernest Stanley soon wants to eject Whiteside, who has filled his basement with penguins, a mummy case and an octopus.

A parade of bizarre characters including movie stars, a professor with a roach farm and 22 Chinese students, who have to go to the bathroom, are among Whiteside's friends, who drive Mr. Stanley out of his dining room and upset his household.

Fred Brockwell, a bank examiner, is assistant to Sam Harbin as director of the play. Brockwell plays two of the bizarre characters, who come to the Stanley home to see Whiteside.

Brockwell and his wife, Carolyn, who plays the part of a glamorous movie star, were active in Little Theatre groups in Del Rio, Tex. and the Azores Islands before moving here.

One subplot of the play focuses on the romantic involvement of a newspaperman, played by Allen Harris, and Whiteside's secretary, played by Judy Greer.

Another subplot deals with Stanley's children, played by Paul Parmenter, who wants to be a photographer and Mrs. Walter Shipley, who wants to marry a young man played by Bill Lashmet.

Walter Shipley, Charleston, plays Whiteside's physician, who is writing a book.

Michael Lee plays Banjo, a Hollywood friend of Whiteside. Harriet Stanley, a former ax murderer is played by Mrs. Bert Rowe Sr. and Mrs. Richard Fussell plays Whiteside's private duty nurse.

Sets for the production were designed and built by Jean Love.

Seven Seek Memphis Mayor Post

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — State Rep. A. W. Willis, seeking to become the first Negro mayor of this old South city, pegged his hopes on a quick victory today that would preclude a runoff.

Willis, first Negro elected to the Tennessee legislature since the Populist period early in the century, faced six white candidates in today's voting and has been given a mathematical chance of receiving a majority of the votes cast.

But unless he does, the odds are slim that he will become the first popularly elected mayor of a major Southern city.

If no candidate receives a majority of the votes today, the top two will meet in a runoff Nov. 2.

In the final week before election Mayor William B. Ingram Jr., and City Commissioner Hunter Lane Jr., both of whom have had substantial Negro support in the past, increased their wooing of these voters.

American Dead and Wounded Total Tops 100,000 in Vietnam Conflict

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command announced today that the number of American dead and wounded in the Vietnam war has passed 100,000.

The weekly casualty report came simultaneously with reports on one of the heavier days of air raids on North Vietnam with Air Force, Navy and Marine pilots hitting the port of Haiphong, two MIG airfields and two bridges near the Red Chinese frontier.

The U.S. Command disclosed the loss of three American planes over the North Tuesday and Wednesday, a period when the Hanoi government claimed 15 aircraft were downed.

Some sharp ground fighting was also reported, with 42 guerrillas killed in one series of skirmishes and air strikes.

The casualty report listed 150 Americans killed and 1,758 wounded last week and said 1,155 Communists were killed.

The latest total, reflecting the lethal artillery exchanges with Red gunners across the demilitarized zone, pushed American casualties in the war to 101,034, including 13,643 killed, 86,635 wounded and 756 missing, by unofficial count.

At the current casualty rate, the Vietnam war will surpass the Korean conflict in six months and become the fourth deadliest war in the nation's history.

The intensification of the war, despite the absence of many large-scale ground actions, was reflected in the headquarters report of 53 ground sweeps in progress and new targets hit for the first time in North Vietnam.

American pilots returning from Wednesday's strikes deep into North Vietnam's heartland reported meeting heavy antiaircraft fire, barrages of Soviet-built ground-to-air missiles and harassing flights of MIG jets. There was one brief dogfight in which no hits were scored. The MIGs nipped at the heels of American bombing formations and then sped to safety when a fight loomed.

In two days, North Vietnamese gunners on the ground shot down two Navy A4 Skyhawks, with one pilot rescued and the other missing, and one Air Force F105 Thunderchief, with the pilot missing, the U.S. Command said. It now has announced a total of 687 warplanes lost over the north.

Wednesday's 118 air missions began with Marine raids in the early morning darkness against MIG airfields at Hoa Lac and Kien An within the Hanoi-Haiphong air defense network.

Air Force pilots swept within 10 miles of Red China for the second straight day to blast the previously cut Lang Son bridge on the northeast supply route from the capital of Hanoi.

Navy pilots raked the previously hit Kien An highway bridge in Haiphong, only 1.7 miles from the city's center, and for the first time bombed the single-lane Chien Chiang highway bridge 15 miles below the Red Chinese frontier.

The Chien Chiang bridge, previously on the Pentagon's list of restricted targets, is on a secondary east-west road northeast of Haiphong. Normally unimportant, it could serve as a bypass route if the supply traffic in Vietnam's northeast corner became tangled.

It appeared one goal of the air raids was to clutter North Vietnam's supply system and to do as much damage as possible before the monsoon winds shift this month. The winds will bring rains and heavy weather almost daily and preclude the day-by-day pounding of many targets.

American planes attacked bridges 10 to 15 miles from China, and a nearby railroad yard, Tuesday.

In addition to the major targets, American pilots raked supply lines in the Hanoi-Haiphong area, bombed both rail lines leading from Hanoi to Red China, hit many antiaircraft and missile sites and harassed the waterways carrying barges south.

At the rail yard at heavily defended Kep, northeast of Hanoi, an estimated 50 rail cars and two locomotives were found. When the bombers left 25, rail cars were destroyed.

Eight-engine B52 bombers still were dumping tons of explosives in the demilitarized zone area despite a 10-day slackening of heavy North Vietnamese artillery attacks on U.S. Marine outposts overlooking infiltration routes below the DMZ.

Headquarters said U.S. air and artillery firepower had broken the back of the Communist artillery assault but Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, said he felt the Reds would try again.

Marine headquarters at Da Nang reported that Communist gunners fired 29 artillery and mortar rounds on Marine bases just below the DMZ Wednesday. Four Marines were killed and seven wounded.

Lt. Gen. William Momyer, recently described it this way:

"As you well know, the targets come down to me from my next higher headquarter, PACF (Pacific Air Force, Honolulu), and he gets his targets from CINCPAC (Commander in Chief Pacific), Adm. Sharp's (Adm. Ulyses Grant Sharp) headquarters. And Obviously Adm. Sharp makes recommendations to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff send the targets back to him."

While noting there were offlimits targets which could be hit, Momyer added: "I look at my job here as taking what is given to me and doing the best I can with it."

Momyer's comments reflect the dispute now raging over the assignment of targets in North Vietnam and the restrictions on air power. At the command level in Vietnam, officers almost universally feel they should have more freedom in selecting targets.

Privately, they accuse Washington of frequently playing a numbers game. For instance, Washington will say that such and such a target was on the list submitted by field commanders and was bombed and consequently the field commanders should be happy. But the officers point out, Washington does not add that no follow-up raid was authorized.

SAIGON, (AP) -- In the small hours each morning the muffled tapping of teletype machines in carrier ready rooms and Air Force operations shacks signals the beginning of another day's bombing raids on North Vietnam.

Operations officers at bases in Thailand and Vietnam and aboard the giant carriers in the Tonkin Gulf get the teleprinter "frag orders" outlining the day's missions.

While pilots still sleep, their names are assigned, the planes are designated, types of bombs and rockets to be used are noted. On a busy day the frag order will outline the work of perhaps 800 individual flights. The Frag Orders -- the term stand for fragmentary order, meaning a breakdown of activities -- sometimes is in general terms. For big missions it contains minute detail.

The air commanders in Vietnam have wide latitude to assign targets in relatively non-sensitive areas of North Vietnam. But for the big targets, the frag orders filter all the way down from the secret war rooms in Washington where decisions are made by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, with President Johnson looking over their shoulders.

The filtering process is long and frustrating. The 7th Air Force commander in Vietnam, once when the air power planners would like to hit them repeatedly. Air power planners also say it sometimes takes frustratingly long to clear some targets like the Hanoi-Haiphong rail line.

In addition to wanting permission for follow-up raids, the fliers still have some prime unhit targets on their lists.

Foremost among these are the MIG airfields at Phuc Yen and Gia Lam. Phuc Yen is now the main MIG base in North Vietnam and the area also shelters the Russian - Chinese - North Vietnamese Air defense center. Gia Lam is the main civil airport for Hanoi, in addition to being a MIG base and airfield comparable to Saigon's jammed Tan Son Nhut.

The port facilities at Cam Pha have been hit only once, and this is North Vietnam's third biggest port and the center from which coal is exported to the Communist bloc (about North Vietnam's only export). The second biggest port of Hon Gai has never had its dock facilites hit although warplanes have struck nearby installations.

The buffer zone near the Chinese border, about 25 miles wide, is rarely penetrated despite such well publicized raids as one recently which dropped a bridge only seven miles from the frontier.

Haiphong's port facilities, of course, are the biggest untouched plum. And within the Haiphong-Hanoi areas are some big storage dumps equally untouched.

In recent weeks, American planes have ranged up and down the two main rail lines which radiate northeast and northwest from Hanoi to the border of Communist China. The targets on these major supply arteries have been mainly bridges, rail yards and rail sidings -- many of them attacked for the first time and some close to the Chinese frontier. The closest so far was the strike against the bridge seven miles from the border and less than one minute away as the jet flies.

From January through July this year, U. S. fighter-bombers have averaged 13,000 sorties -- individual strikes -- per month over the north. Three quarters of these sorties were against roads, rail lines, trucks -- the lines of communications and the supplies moving on them. Officials estimated 1,900 fixed targets have been attacked including bridges, troop barracks, oil storage tanks and power plants.

Air policy spokesmen in Vietnam, aware of the pressures from Washington, won't talk about numbers of percentages in relation to targets which have been hit or should be hit.

Almost unanimously, however, they will say privately that the policy of using air power in piecemeal bits is not the way they would like to fight the war.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Fear of misinterpretation of our Girl Scout editorial of Tuesday evening this was for this girl scout area and not just for the city of Sikeston as Sikeston's part is included in the United Fund drive - we are sorry we could have misled.

Sikeston residents, who have wondered whether they wanted cable television, soon can check with citizens of the up and coming city of Malden.

Malden has a city government more willing to let television viewers have what they want.

While the Sikeston City fathers drag their feet on any proposal to introduce better viewing and a wider selection of programs, Malden prepares to be served by Cotton Hill Cablevision.

Service men now are making the necessary hookups with a prospect that viewing may begin Oct. 15. Subscribers will be able to tune in six channels, FM radio music and a weather channel. Among the television programs offered will be ABC from Jonesboro, Ark.; NBC from Memphis, ABC from Memphis and St. Louis. Of course the picture from Paducah and Cape Girardeau will be improved.

Whether one Sikeston resident wants cable television or 5,000 desire it is of no concern to us.

What we do desire is that Sikeston people should have the opportunity under this country's free enterprise system to buy the service if they want it.

The failure to make it available is a restraint of competition as well as a denial of a service that many Americans even in the largest cities have been willing and eager to buy.

Why restrict Sikeston residents to what Paducah, Cape Girardeau and Harrisburg, Ill., television stations have to offer?

Or why restrict the residents to inferior viewing of these stations when a better picture is available from all of them particularly on color telecasts?

The answers must come from the city administration, which continues to exercise a curious attitude of conservative timidity on the matter. Who is being protected from whom?

TAXING THE ADS

A court test of the new Iowa tax on advertising is almost inevitable, but probably not before the new levy goes into effect on Monday, October 2. The tax law was hammered out in closed-door sessions of legislative leaders of both parties with Democratic Gov. Harold Hughes and rushed through the legislature with little debate.

The Iowa Tax Commission admits to be in a state of confusion about the new law. Lack of legislative guidelines on administration will make enforcement difficult. The legislature decreed only that the sales tax be levied on gross receipts of advertising in newspapers, directories, shoppers' guides, magazines, radio and television, movies, billboards, and "point of purchase" outlets. The Iowa Press Association and the Iowa Broadcasters Association individually are preparing court challenges.

The tax rate is 3 per cent. At present only Arizona taxes advertising -- at half the Iowa rate. And the Arizona law is a good deal less comprehensive than the law about to become effective in Iowa.

THE HIGH COST OF VETERANS

The cost of war does not end with the cessation of hostilities. For decades thereafter, veterans payments and services remain a fixed government expense. The Veterans Administration now spends around $6.6 billion a year for medical care, pensions, various types of compensation, and related services for former members of the armed forces. In addition, the Defence Department will spend about $2 billion in fiscal 1968 for retirement pay. Thus, more than six cents of every dollar spent by the federal government goes to veterans.

Veterans will claim an even larger portion of federal expenditures starting Sunday, Oct. 1. That is the effective date of the Veterans Pension and Readjustment Act of 1967, approved by both houses of Congress without a single negative vote. The law is expected to increase veterans benefits by about $260 million in its first year.

Nearly one-half of all Americans will share in the new or improved benefits -- around 26 million veterans, their wives and children, and veterans' widows. Persons already receiving VA pensions will get cost-of-living increases; "Viet Nam era" veterans and their families will be eligible for a wide range of death and medical benefits; and educational assistance under last year's Cold War GI Bill will be increased.

Pensions for Viet Nam veterans are expected to cost only $1 million in the first year, since the average age of returning servicemen is only 24 years. But as these men grow older and develop disabilities, the cost will rise steeply. Some Washington officials estimate that federal payments to Viet Nam veterans will total $2 billion a year by the end of the century.

NEW YORK (AP) — Goals are a necessary part of life.

If you have no goals, you rust to death.

If you have too few goals, or goals too easily gained, you wind up bored and cranky.

Of course, it is also possible to have too many goals, so many that they leave you confused and frustrated, undecided which to pursue and which to abandon.

Therefore it's a good idea to have two kinds of goals: real goals and daydream goals.

Real goals are the ones you sweat to make true. Daydream goals are more fun. They are the fantasies that tease the mind, things you've never done and probably never will.

Looking over my own list of unwon daydream goals, I find that I have yet to—

Hypnotize a charging rhinoceros with a single glance.

Eat a bird of paradise under glass.

Get the girl who brings coffee around our office to let me open a charge account.

Wallow in a European spa.

Beat my wife three times in a row at gin rummy.

Make a hole in one at golf.

Sip bean soup in the U.S. Senate's lunchroom, or champagne from the slipper of Julie Andrews.

Rent a real live gorilla as a subway bodyguard.

Finish a book written by Proust, Thomas Mann, James Joyce or Kathleen Windsor.

Build a more stately mansion for my soul, as the swift seasons roll.

Get anything back for a box top that was worth the quarter I also enclosed.

Receive a written apology from an Internal Revenue agent for the honest mistakes I made while following the advice of my barber on how to fill out my 1948 income tax.

Attend a testimonial dinner to a gall bladder surgeon given by his grateful patients.

Receive a standing, 10-minute ovation for any speech I've made to our local PTA.

Permanently fix any leaky faucet.

Lose an ounce while on a "quick, easy diet, guaranteed to melt pounds away as if by magic."

Go on a whale hunt and be the first to call, "Avast, mates, thar she blows."

Make a martini dry enough to satisfy all the hydrophobes who come to any cocktail party I throw.

Cook a wolf or pickle a herring.

Dissolve an expensive pearl in wine and offer it to a lovely lady with the remark, "Baby, when you go with me, you go first class."

Play a solo on the bongo drums at Carnegie Hall.

Land a job as a traveling salesman demonstrating skin decals at nudist conventions.

Save a millionaire from drowning and be asked to name my own reward.

MISDIRECTED IDEALISM

An officer of one of our leading oil companies, who formerly was chancellor of a great university, finds that misdirected campus idealism threatens "a real disservice to the national interest" in a little noted area.

The basis of this is evidence that a great many of today's undergraduates have little enthusiasm for careers in business. They equate corporate activity with sterility. So, as the spokesman puts it, "The prospect of our most promising youth all hastening into research, teaching, government, and solving the problems of peace, poverty, and race relations, leaving to the pedestrian and second-rate the management of the economic engine on whose product all these other activities depend for their ultimate support is a sobering one."

As he goes on to say, the guidance of corporate affairs is among the most challenging and exciting of activities. The corporation, to quote him directly again, ". . . is the instrument by which scientific discoveries are converted into something of social value and utility and made available to all the people." It is the mainstay of a free society. It is the source of our economic strength and power. And, through its work, the road to a better world is pushed forward.

KEEP THE SWORDS BLUNTED BY WORDS

Though he would never admit it to his editor, many a reporter has found coverage of United Nations proceedings a delightful assignment. The droning talk of the diplomats exerts a powerful soporific effect which the soft seats in the hall do nothing to dispel.

Many people who watched the Security Council's deliberations on the Middle East crisis over their television sets may well be inclined to agree.

But it is to be hoped that the United Nations continues to talk about the problem. And talk. And talk. If this seems futile, we can only repeat Churchill's famous statement that jaw-jaw is better than war-war.

On the assumption that a great deal of bluffing is involved in the menacing developments that have taken place in the Middle East, the longer the diplomats talk, the sounder the whole world will sleep.

H. L. Hunt Says

REVOLUTION CLOSE TO HOME

Not long ago Fidel Castro was host in Havana to a conference of Latin American communists. The theme sounded throughout the meeting was: "The duty of all revolutionaries is to make revolutions."

Castro wants and expects to see communist governments established in a number of Latin American countries. He looks ahead, no doubt, to the day when Panama may be the operator of the Panama Canal. His revolutionaries would have a simple task of taking over the Canal once the Americans are squeezed out.

Another meeting, again in Havana, for Castro's War of Revolution is planned for next January. It is to be called "A Cultural Congress of Asian, African and Latin American Writers, Artists and Scientists." Its prime function will be to whip up propaganda for the policy of revolution set at the August conference.

Castro and his communist revolutionaries have our entire hemisphere on the defensive. The path to revolution is being paved by Cuban guerrillas throughout the whole of Latin America. The countries to the south have experienced many revolutions. Traditionally they take place in the capital city. By contrast, Castro's agents concentrate their subversive activity in the countryside, just as the Red Viet Cong do in Vietnam.

Today, nearly nien years after Castro came to power, he seems as firmly entrenched as ever, and an even greater threat to the peace of the Americas. He continues to get aid from the Soviet communist bloc at the rate of about $2.6 million a day. Communists everywhere in the world work together in their drive to overthrow freedom. HLH.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

CHEYENNE -- Twenty years ago almost to the month, I traveled through Wyoming collecting boxcars of food for Western Europe. Last week I rode over part of the same route, this time going west, not east.

Twenty years had made some changes. The snow-capped peaks of the rockies were just as majestic, their necklace of aspens in the valleys just as golden, their pine-tree jewels along the timberline just as green. The antelope were just as aloof, just as curious.

But Ed Bailey, who traveled with us as superintendent of the Union Pacific before is president of that mighty railroad today. Dr. R. J. Stapleton of Green River, who handled the collection of food for the Friendship Train in Western Wyoming, is still going strong, but Tracy McCraken, State Chairman, is dead now. Succeeding him as publisher of the Wyoming newspapers is his son, Bob McCracken, who every year masterminds the Treagle train (sponsored by the Tribune and Eagle in Cheyenne), which we rode on this autumn day from Cheyenne to Larmie to see Wyoming University's cowboys edge out the Colorado State Rams.

Teno Roncalio, the ex-bootblack who 20 years ago was down to meet us shivering in the snow of Rock Springs, along with the bare-kneed high school band, had gone on to become famous as a congressman in Washington, defeating the grandson and great great grandson of two U.S. Presidents, William Henry Harrison.

AMERICAN BRAND POLITICS

Politics is just as absorbing today as it was 20 years ago. Congressman Harrison, who returned to his old job in Washington after Roncalio ran for the U.S. senate, was on the train and there were no harsh words between him and the son of the Italian immigrant coal miner who once defeated him.

Nor were there between Sen. Gale McGee, Democrat and Rep. Charlie Halleck of Indiana, the Republican leader. They joshed each other publicly about having "come clean" from Washington. Halleck said he was a "coin collector" and tried to collect all the coins he could. Sen. McGee said he "wanted Drew Pearson to know that I paid for my own ticket from Washington."

Remarked John Banner, the bulky TV Sergeant, Schultz of "Hogan's Heroes," "Where would you find such political Camaraderie between political rivals, except in America?"

Passengers on this train were just as interesting as those of 20 years ago, a cross section of the state: 700 doctors, lawyers, newspaper editors, ranchers, merchants; John Bell, who runs 4,000 head of herefords on his vast acreage around iron mountain; Gov. Stanley Hathaway, who knows the first name of almost every citizen in his state; George Guy, who studied under Judge Thurman Arnold, the old trust-buster, at the University of Wyoming Law School.

A lot of people knew Thurman Arnold. He had been mayor of Laramie, the only Democrat in the Wyoming legislature and a captain in the Wyoming National Guard when it went off to fight with pershing in Mexico in 1916 and later in World War I.

There was a lot of conviviality aboard the Treagle train last week, and also a lot of talk of wars -- World War I, in which some had fought; World War II, in which more had fought; and now the war in Vietnam. People didn't like the last war. They didn't like any of the wars for that matter, but they figured the first two were necessary.

"IS GENEROSITY DEAD?"

It was George Guy who asked me what was on a lot of people's minds: "Do you think you could get people to contribute to another Friendship train today?"

I doubted it. The friendship train in 1947 had preceded the Marshall Plan; and Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, the Republican who helped Harry Truman get congressional approval for the Marshall Plan, cited the train as evidence of how the American people felt about helping Europe.

This was followed by foreign aid to many parts of the world in the greatest outpouring of generosity, government to government, mankind has ever seen. It saved many countries from starvation and revolution, left bridges, dams, irrigation projects, schools and hospitals behind.

But it also left armies, dictatorships and military juntas, equipped by U.S. aid, and some of them have been neither helpful nor grateful to the American people. Dictator Franco of Spain, supposedly the No. 1 anti-communist, is the chief supplier of aid and trade to Fidel Castro, No. 1 communist in the Western Hemisphere.

Then there is Charles DeGaulle. I suppose De Gaulle has done more to sour American generosity than any other one man in the world today.

In the railroad station in Cheyenne stands the boxcar of the French Gratitude train. It once held "Quarante Hommes, Huit Chevaux" (forty men, eight horses) in the days when Capt. Thurman Arnold was marshaling the Wyoming National Guard up the faltering railroads of France to the muddy battlefields of Verdun, Chateau - Thierry and the Argonne.

Today the old boxcar stands in the Cheyenne station as a token of friendship from the French people, not the government; people who deeply appreciated American generosity and sent an entire "Merci Train" in response.

But the car's brightly colored coats of arms designating the French provinces have been stolen, just as the politicians have stolen large segments of goodwill to us for their selfish gain. And the paint is peeling, just as American - Franco friendship in De Gaulle's day has been eroding.

No, it would be difficult to launch another successful Friendship train. And what this means is that the American people are rapidly drifting isolationist. It was from the isolationist withdrawal of Americans from international affairs after World War I that World War II began.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

TAKES A WALK

Reuther Bolts Labor's Pro-Johnson Political Machine.

Washington, D.C.: -- Embattled Walter Reuther, never one to devote himself to a single campaign at a time, has now quietly plunged into do-it-yourself national politics.

The Detroit "redhead" now has definitely bolted the ardently pro-Lyndon Johnson AFL-CIO political organization -- just as its leaders meet almost daily to plan for next month's and next year's elections.

By this time of the year his United Automobile Workers (UAW) traditionally would have paid some $120,000 in "quota" donations to the big federation's Committee on Political Education (COPE). He has not paid a penny.

By this time his far-flung union locals would have been exhorted to swing into vital election drives in several states (New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, for example) where the 1967 results could have heavy impact on the '68 presidential election. There has been only a very noisy silence.

By this time he would have dispatched hundreds of thousands of UAW members' names to the COPE computer center (the Machinist union's $1 million Univac III) in preparation for the '68 Congressional and presidential drives. He has refused to send along a single name.

Though it is not known outside labor's inner sanctum, AFL-CIO President George Meany wrote to all international union presidents for their membership lists in eight states where labor's political strategists will campaign scientifically on an electronic data processing basis.

In recent elections the electronic thinking machines operated statewide only in Pennsylvania. Now the decision is to move the gadgetry into six other states: Maryland, Ohio, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas and California (and the District of Columbia). Reuther has massive membership in these states.

For years Reuther has champloned such computerized campaigning.

But he turned Mr. Meany down flat. No names, no money, no cooperation.

His former union brethren point out that the $120,000 is merely a bag of peanut shells compared to what the UAW has in its own Citizenship Fund--relief, for which almost $150 million will be available if needed.

But the list of names would only have cost the UAW a few dollars in postage.

So Reuther's former colleagues in labor's high command reckon he's building an independent machine, or a party, or a precinct - by - precinct community action crusade with an "opening to the left."

This could be based on his virtually unobserved million-dollar Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty, of which he is chairman.

In sophisticated labor circles it is noted that he has not lined up with the pro - Lyndon Johnson forces inside the overheated Americans for Democratic Action (ADA). His voice is loud and clear and influential when he unleashes it at ADA gatherings. But he has not attended recent board meetings. Nor did he dispatch any message to the ADA board people urging them to down the dump-Johnson drive.

Reuther has powerful influence inside that intellectual mix of university people, reformers and labor leaders. He could have influenced enough board members, or at least prodded them, to come out and vote to dilute the razor-edged criticism of President Johnson. But he made no move. Other labor leaders who, like "Walter," contribute heavily to ADA's always empty coffers tried to protect the President. Reuther did not budge.

Few inside labor are predicting he will bolt the President's camp as he has labor's tent. But neither is anyone--including those high in the UAW--prognosticating that he won't take a walk.

He could run an independent political machine which would be a party in everything but name. He could insist that some of his own union people be nominated for top offices by the Democrats. Last year, some Michigan Democrats urged Reuther's colleague, Leonard Woodcock, leader of the union's behemoth GM division, to run for governor against George Romney. Had Woodcock not been running for the vice-presidency inside the UAW, he would have taken the political bid.

There always is, of course, the great fraternity between Reuther and Bob Kennedy. They may not buck the President himself, but they may together fan out and fight for new Democrats to replace the old in the House and Senate.

Whatever it is that Walter Reuther is whipping together, it will be unveiled as the newest model in political action when the auto union meets next May in its Constitutional Convention.

It could be that Reuther will love the Johnsonians in November next as he did last May. But it could be the announcement of new political romances.

Jane Ellen Lambert Marries Dr. Hobson Darney Brock Jr.

MEMPHIS-- The McClean Avenue Baptist church chapel was the scene Saturday afternoon at 4:30 p.m. for the wedding of Miss Jane Ellen Lambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Lambert of Sikeston, Mo. and Dr. Hobson Darney Brock, Jr., son of Mrs. Hobson Darney Brock and the late Dr. Brock of McComb, Miss.

Silver urns filled with white gladioli flaked the prie dieu and three tall branched candelabra formed the background for the double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Lloyd Barker.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Audley Brown of Charleston, who accompanied Louis Jones of Sikeston, vocal soloist, and also played the traditional wedding marches.

Miss Ann Waters of Sikeston and Miss Ann Barnwell of New Madrid, Mo., cousins of the bride, served as candlelighters. They wore moss green empire style floor-length gowns with matching bows in their hair and wristlets of yellow roses.

Mrs. Henry Coulon of Denver, Colo., cousin of the bride, was wore identical slim empire gowns matron of honor. Miss Charlotte of ivory ottoman enhanced by a Boyce, Miss Linda Ferguson, banding of crocheted lace at the Miss Jane Ella Yount and Mrs. waist trimmed with moss green David Garner, all of Sikeston, velvet ribbon. The lace and rib- were bridesmaids. The matron bon was repeated in an edging of honor and the bridesmaids at the wrist of the long sleeves and centered the panel down the back of the skirt. They carried bouquets of yellow roses and ivy.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a modified empire silhouette of ivory silk organza with full chapel-length train. Re-embroidered Alencon lace jeweled with pearls was appliqued over the bodice and extended in motifs down the front of the skirt. Her bridal veil of silk illusion was secured by a coutour pillbox of leaves and flowers. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias.

Dr. Brock chose his brother, John Brock of McComb, as best man. Groomsmen included Ralph Barnwell, Jr., of New Madrid, cousin of the bride; Dr. Jack Sanford of Covington, Ky., Dr. Richard Stout of Memphis and Dr. Luis Navarro of Caracas, Venezuela.

Mrs. Lambert, mother of the bride, wore a French blue costume suit heavily jeweled at the neckline, with veil and slippers to match. Mrs. Brock, mother of the groom, wore a pale blue suit with veil and cornflower blue. Both mothers wore white orchids.

The reception following the ceremony was held in the Red Room of the Top of the 100 Club. A satin brocaded bride's table held the four-tiered wedding cake, topped with a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath, flanked by sliver candelabra. On either side of the bridal table were silver urns filled with white gladioli.

The serving table, a replica of the bride's table, was centered with a large silver angel epergne filled with white roses. Punch, mints, nuts and hot hors d'oeuvers were served to approximately 100 guests.

Miss Betty Ann Brown of Charleston attended the guest register. She wore a floor length moss green dress and a wristlet of yellow roses. Her younger sister, Miss Catherine Brown, distributed minature green rice bags to the guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Brock left for a wedding trip of undisclosed destination. Upon their return, they will be at home in Jackson, Miss., where Dr. Brock has established his practice.

REHEARSAL DINNER

One Down... Three To Go

BOSTON (AP) — While Lou Brock was concerned with shoulders and hips and feet, Carl Yastrzemski worried about hands.

The hands were beautiful on defense — as beautiful as they had been all year — but they didn't do anything for the Boston slugger when they held a bat, and that's what bothered him.

So, after Brock's record-tying four hits and two stolen bases plus Bob Gibson's six-hit pitching led St. Louis to a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox in the World Series opener Wednesday, Yastrzemski went back onto the field and took 20 minutes of batting practice.

He hoped the extra work would help for today's second game in which he would face Dick Hughes and the Cardinals would go against Jim Lonborg.

The American League's Triple Crown winner, who went hitless in four times at bat, spent a few minutes resting in the Boston clubhouse after the game, then changed uniforms and joined Ken Harrelson and Rico Petrocelli, who also had gone hitless, on the field.

"My hands were slow, real slow," Yastrzemski explained after emerging from the batting cage. "I wasn't using my hands enough, and I think I was dropping them a little too low."

While Yastrzemski stood in the cage swatting at pitches from third baseman Joe Foy, Brock stood on a chair in front of his locker in the Cardinal clubhouse, sipping a bottle of orange pop, wiping his sweat-soaked face with a towel and talking about pitchers' flaws — flaws that he spots in their shoulders, their hips and their feet.

Offensively, the opposing left fielders were a study in contrast.

Brock rapped four singles in his first four at-bats — he walked his last time up — stole second in the first and seventh innings and scored the Cardinals' runs, both times on grounders by Roger Maris.

That was enough to overcome a homer by pitcher Jose Santiago that tied the game in the third inning.

Yastrzemski, on the other hand, fouled out, grounded out and flied to Brock twice. Only in the field did he show the almost unbelievable skill that enables him to make the big plays and that sparked the Red Sox to their first pennant in 21 years. When Brock singled to left in the fourth with two out and Julian Javier on second base, he fired a perfect, no-bounce strike to Russ Gibson at the plate, and Javier was an easy out. When Curt Flood led off the next inning with a line drive that rose as it neared Yastrzemski, the left fielder raced over, leaped and snared the ball, averting a sure double or triple.

Those big plays, however, were not enough to overcome Yaz' lack of production at the plate. "If you're swinging the bat well and feel good like I did that last couple of weeks of the season, you'll hit anyone," he said. "But if you feel like I did today, my six-year-old son could get me out.

"If I'd hit a little we should have won today. We're still going to win the Series, though, and I can't wait until tomorrow."

Back in the Cardinal clubhouse, Brock was talking about the first game, the one that made the Cadinals even bigger favorites to win the series.

"All pitchers have flaws," Brock said, explaining the method that has made him the National League's base stealing champion the past two years. "I've never seen a pitcher that didn't have a flaw.

"The flaws fall into three categories— the shoulders, the hips and the feet. You take just one look at a pitcher, and you can tell what his flaw is. It doesn't matter who the pitcher is or whether you've seen him before or not.

"Santiago had a flaw, I spotted it right away."

Brock spotted it so quickly that he stole second in the first inning on Santiago's first pitch to the next batter, Curt Flood. After he singled in the seventh, he again stole on the first pitch to Flood.

He then moved to third as Flood grounded out and scooted home on Maris' grounder to second baseman Jerry Adair, who with the rest of the Boston infield was playing in close.

"Jerry didn't have any play at the plate," Boston manager Dick Williams said. "If the ball had been hit straight at him, it would have been different. But give Brock credit. He's a great runner."

That run wiped out the wholly unexpected blast that Santiago placed on top of the left-center field wall, about 360 feet away from home plate, in the third inning. That blow came on an 0-2 pitch.

"I hung a curve ball on him," Gibson said. "It was a bad pitch. I've made 'em before, and I'll make them again."

Gibson didn't make too many other bad pitches. Fully recovered from a broken leg suffered July 15, the fireballing right-hander struck out 10. In the Cardinals' last Series, in 1964, Gibson set a record by striking out 31 in 27 innings.

Besides Santiago, no other Red Sox advanced past second base, and only two got that far.

Besides the home run, Santiago had only one other thing to be happy about. He put down Orlando Cepeda, his friend from Puerto Rico, four straight times.

ROGER MARIS drove in both Cardinal runs in yesterday's first game of the World Series at the St. Louis National League pennant winners posted a 2-1 opening game victory at Boston against the Red Sox.

LOU BROCK, St. Louis Cardinal speedster and left handed slugger, tied a major league World Series record with four hits in four trips to the plate in yesterday's 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox. He stole second base twice and scored both Cardinal runs.

BOB GIBSON thwarted the Boston Red Sox and American League triple crown winner Carl Yastrzemski in yesterday's opening game of the World Series, winning 2-1. Gibson allowed only six hits and stuck out 10.

Unbeaten Tigers Take On Ohio State

COLUMBIA (AP) -- Missouri is facing an upset winner for the third straight week and the unbeaten Tigers figure to make it three in a row here Saturday, this time over Arizone, fresh from a 14-7 stunner at Ohio State.

A turnout of 48,000 is expected for the 1:30 p.m, CDT, kickoff.

The victory at Ohio State before 77,468 ranks as the foremost in Arizona football history because it's the first ever over a Big Ten team.

It's not as incredible as it seems. Ohio State is well below its glory days. But there was nothing freakish about the Arizona victory. The Wildcats did it with a fierce rushing game and solid defense. Bruce Lee, then the No. 2 quarterback, led his team to both touchdowns.

This is right down Missouri's alley, however. Coach Dan Devine has another sound, tough defensive club and the offense is much improved over last year's 6-3-1 club.

Gary Kombrink, a veteran quarterback, is the Big Eight total offense leader with 365 yards. He ran for 128 yards against SMU in a 21-0 victory. He passed for 132 and ran for 101 in a 13-6 victory at Northweseern.

Fullback Barry Lischner ripped the middle for 72 and 71 yards the first two games. Halfback Joe Staggers is a home run threat.

SMU opened with a nationally ajlevsied 20-17 upset over Texas A&M. Northwestern knocked off nationally - ranked Miami of Florida.

At the Ohio State 9-yard line, Lee whispered only to Edmonds that he intended to keep it on a bootleg.

Ticket Scalpers Wanted By Police

ST. LOUIS (AP)— The assistant chief of detectives in St. Louis has come up with a deterrent against World Series ticket scalpers. Major John Doherty said Wednesday:

"Anyone who buys a World Series ticket from a scalper and will turn in the scalper's name to police, will have his money returned and be permitted to keep the tickets free of charge."

Doherty doubled his security detail against scalpers after reports came n that tickets were exchanging hands at a rapid rate. He reminded his men of the laws against scalping and instructed them to arrest anyone, "regardless of his station in life, who exchanges a World Series ticket for one cent more than the regular price."

Detroit Took Their Lumps, Bumps And Falls During Pennant Fight

By JOE FALLS
from The Sporting News

If you'll pardon the pronvincialism, I'd like to talk about my guys - the Tigers.

Now they aren't to be confused with the Daddy Dodgers or the Magnificent Mets. They're merely the Desperate Detroiters, but no team in modern times - and I assume Uncle Robbie, Babe Herman and all the boys from Brooklyn can be considered a part of modern times, even though some of their efforts were rather archaic - ever went through quite what my team went through this season.

As I wrote this, I have no idea whether the Tigers won the pennant or lost the pennant. But it really doesn't make much difference. This is a season they'll never forget.

The year 1967 will live in legend for the Desperate Detroiters.

What team in history ever lost one player with the mumps, another when he fell down the stairs at home, another when his foot went to sleep, another because of heart trouble, another because of a wholesale riot, another. . . well, this is why we call them the Desperate Detroiters.

If all started with Al Kaline's pinky.

It happened on the night of June 27 in Detroit. Things weren't going very well at the time, either for Kaline or the Tigers. The fans were on them pretty good and when Kaline struck out against Sam McDowell, he lost control of himself and slammed his bat into the rack in a violent fit of anger. His hand smashed against the bat rack and broke a pinky on his left hand.

Kaline was so embarrassed he remained away from the ball park for a few days. "I couldn't stand to face the guys," he said. "I've never been so embarrassed in my life."

His hand was placed in a cast and when he returned to the clubhouse, he tacked up a telegram next to his locker.

It said: "Nice going, stupid."

The telegram was signed: "Harmon Killebrew and Bob Allison."

But this was only the start for the Desperate Detroiters.

Jim Northrup was rocking along at a .300 clip when he got the mumps from his six-year-old son, James T. II. As the swelling came up, Northrup's average went down. He was out a week and it cost him his timing. . .And some of his strength. . .And as Northrup himself said: "I'm still not talking to the kid."

It was a fight for Northrup to stay in the .270s the rest of the way.

And Eddie Mathews - he took a day off early in September to visit his family in Milwaukee and proceeded to fall down 12 steps of stairs and bruise his body so badly he, too, was out for a week.

"It really happened, no kidding, honest," said Mathews with an embarrassed grin.

"Okay, if I'd been drinking, I wouldn't have got hurt," he said with a smile. His back and his hip were badly bruised. "I feel like I've been in a fight," he added.

And then there was Denny McLain and the curious case of the Sleeping Foot.

Denny got knocked out by the Red Sox on the night of September 18. On the morning of September 19, he telephoned the Tigers to tell them that he had dislocated a few of his toes on his left foot.

"You won't believe it but that's what happened," he said, crossing his heart. "I was sitting in the chair watching. "The Untouchables' on television when my foot went to sleep on me. When I went to get up, it caved in on me and I fell over."

That scratched Denny from any more starts.

Willie Horton hobbled throughout the entire season on a lame leg - a bone spur in his left heel. It bothered him so much he told his wife not to expect him home for dinner the night the season ended - he was going straight into the hospital for an operation.

Bill Freehan was hit by pitched balls no fewer than 19 times to establish a club record. It seemed like 18 of these HBP's were on his left forearm.

The Tigers got Don Demeter from Cleveland and he was going to be their righthanded-hitting first baseman and their No. 1 righthanded pinch - hitter, but Don came down with some circulatory trouble around his heart and never reported to the team. The deal was called off.

The Tigers lost Mickey Lolich when the city of Detroit was ravaged by the riots. The Mick is a member of the Michigan Air National Guard and he worked the streets for more than a week.

Ask Mayo Smith about it when you see him at the World Series. He'll tell you what it's been like managing these Desperate Detroiters.

Vikings Next Foe For Football Cards

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. - Looking for their third straight victory, the St. Louis Football Cardinals invade the northland this week, taking on the Minnesota Vikings at Metropolitan Stadium on Sunday.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. (CDT).

The Big Red's impressive, 38-28 victory over the Detroit Lions was cheering to everyone. The Cardinals spotted the Lions a pair of first-quarter touchdowns, stormed back to cut the lead to 21-17 at halftime, then poured it on in the second half.

Young Jim Hart, maturing with each game, led the Cardinals with 19 completions in 27 attempts for 313 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Even more significantly, on the Cardinals' five scoring drives, Hart completed 15 of 18.

John Roland had the biggest scoring day of his NFL career with three touchdowns, a pair on one-yard bursts and the third on a six-yard run.

Billy Gambrell and Jackie Smith were on the receiving end of Hart's touchdown passes, covering 48 and 57 yards, respectively, and Jim Bakken booted ive conversions and a 39-yard ield goal. It was the 14th consecutive game in which Bakken had kicked a field goal, matching an NFL record set by Cleveland's Lou Groza in the 1950-51 seasons. Bakken will have a chance to establish a new NFL standard this week.

The Vikings, under new coach Bud Grant, have dropped their first three games, two of them by narrow margins. They opened with a 27-21 loss to San Francisco, then were beaten by the Los Angeles Rams, 39-3, then lost to the Chicago Bears, 17-7, last Sunday.

Sunday will be the first of two straight road games for the Cardinals. They play the Cleveland Browns in Cleveland on October 15, before returning home for a pair of dates -- against the Philadelphia Eagles on October 22 and the Green Bay Packers on Monday night, October 30.

A-State Ranked Fourth

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Diego State Aztecs, solid leaders in The Associated Press' small-college football poll, will be seeking their 20th consecutive victory Saturday night when they meet Long Beach State.

The Aztecs will be heavily favored. Long Beach won its opener, 39-7 over California Poly at Pomona, but dropped the next two, 55-27 to San Francisco State and 35-25 to San Fernando Valley.

San Diego State was heavily favored again in the latest weekly balloting of sports writers and broadcasters on the AP's national panel. The Aztecs accumulated five votes for first-place and 118 points on a basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, nine for second etc. The leaders won their 19th in a row by beating California Poly of San Luis Obispo, 26-20, last weekend.

The Waynesburg, Pa. Yellow Jackets replaced Tennesse State in second place. Waynesburg advanced three positions after defeating Ohio Northern 48-13. Tennessee State slipped to eighth place, the result of a 14-10 setback by Texas Southern.

North Dakota State is third followed by Arkansas State, Northwestern Louisiana, Parsons and the University of Texas at Arlington.

Presbyterian, No. 9, and the University of Tennessee at Martin, No. 10, are the new teams in the rankings.

The top ten, with first place votes in parentheses and total points on a 10-9-8 etc. basis:

1.	San Diego St. (5)	118
2.	Waynesburg (1)	75
3.	North Dakota St. (1)	69
4.	Arkansas State (2)	60
5.	Northwestern La. (1)	53
6.	Parsons	41
7.	Tex Arlington	35
8.	Tenn. State	21

ONE OF THE FINEST RICE CROPS in Missouri in many years is being harvested now in the area south of Poplar Bluff, Mo., in what is called the Bootheel. An unlikely crop for the Mid-West rice is a major commodity in the southeast corner of the state and an even larger business in neighboring Arkansas. Rice is under cultivation on about 4,000 acres of land in Missouri.

Rice Market Beckons Bootheel

By Bill Ellingsworth
Of the Kansas City Star

POPLAR BLUFF, MO. - First, it was the 4-ton combine that sank to a halt in the muck, Then a large tractor towing a grain hopper ground to a standstill, followed by another combine and a second grain hopper.

A massive, tandem-whelled tow-out tractor did its best to dislodge the various pieces of machinery, only to dig itself into a hole. Another tow-out tractor came, but its fan belt broke and it was useless.

At the final count, six pieces of farm machinery sat hub-deep (that's a tractor hub) in mud at various locations in the 100-acre field. It might at first seem foolish that these vehicles even ventured into such a field, but there was nothing unusual about the situation and George C. Norwood, co-owner of the land, summed it up by saying:

"This is rice farming."

The Missouri Bootheel land is a long way from the Orient and the equipment doesn't resemble anything you would fine in the stair-stepped rice paddies of China or Vietnam. But rice is still a big commodity in this area and for the last week, and for the next four weeks, the rice harvest will be in full swing.

There are about 4,000 acres of land here in the Bootheel that are devoted in the raising of rice, and when you are out sloshing around in the calf-deep water, it is difficult to imagine that you are really in Missouri.

One of the major producers of rice here is the Duncan-Norwood farm, owned by Wilburn Duncan and his brother-in-law, Norwood. For 14 years they have been growing nato rice, a mediun-grain rice, that is sold on the domestic market for a variety of uses. Much of the rice produced in this area is also earmarked for export.

Duncan was born on a rice farm in Arkansas, one of the major rice-producing states in the nation, and Norwood married Duncan's sister. Later, the business association began and, to date, has been a very successful union.

Rice farming is a hectic business, fraught with all types of problems. Once the rice seed is sown, the growing must be watched closely. Dikes must be constructed every few dozen feet and then water must be pumped during the growing season to irrigate the crop.

Once the rice grows to about two inches, water starts filling the dike-encircled areas.

Normally the water is drained about three weeks prior to harvest, but with three inches of rain in the area last week, farmers like Duncan and Norwood were forced to harvest wet.

"We'd prefer to harvest on dry ground," Duncan said "but the corp just won't wait for us. Once you have a rip crop you must get it out of the field or you have worked all year for nothing."

A big problem this year has been with blackbirds, who eat the grain.

On a modern farm, blackbirds are fought with technologically advanced tools. And Duncan, Norwood and Ray Thomas, who farms 318 acres, went after the birds in a way that the birds weren't expecting - by air.

"We equipped a small airplane with a high-powered siren and a bright red beacon," Norwood said. "And every night the pilot would swoop over the fields and scatter the birds. It's the best thing yet."

Cost Was $65

It cost an average of $65 an acre to bring the rice to the harvest stage. Chemicals were applied to keep down grass. The ground was fertilized and the airplane was used. All of this to produce a crop that should bring in excess of $2.25 a bushel and yield in the neighborhood of 125 bushels an acre.

Duncan, Norwood and Thomas are inpressed this year with the quality of their crop and feel that it is one of the best grown in the Bootheel area.

"This is good quality rice," Duncan said as he let some of the rough (unhusked) kernels slip through his fingers. "We were fortunate this year."

The government keeps a tight rein on the rice growers, and few of the farmers in the area have allotments much over 300 acres. However, the growers don't complain. They have a pretty strong organization themselves in the Arkansas Rice Growers Co-operative association, with headquarters in Corning, Ark., about 35 miles south of here.

Have Good Climate

The Bootheel and the Arkansas area have an ideal climate for rice, and because of this Arkansas is the second leading producer in the nation, next only to California. In Misouri, Duncan, Norwood and Thomas have the two leading allotments for a total of 628 acres.

Asked what the incentive is for raising rice, Duncan said the yield and the money are most definitely points of consideration, but added that the challenge is enticing too.

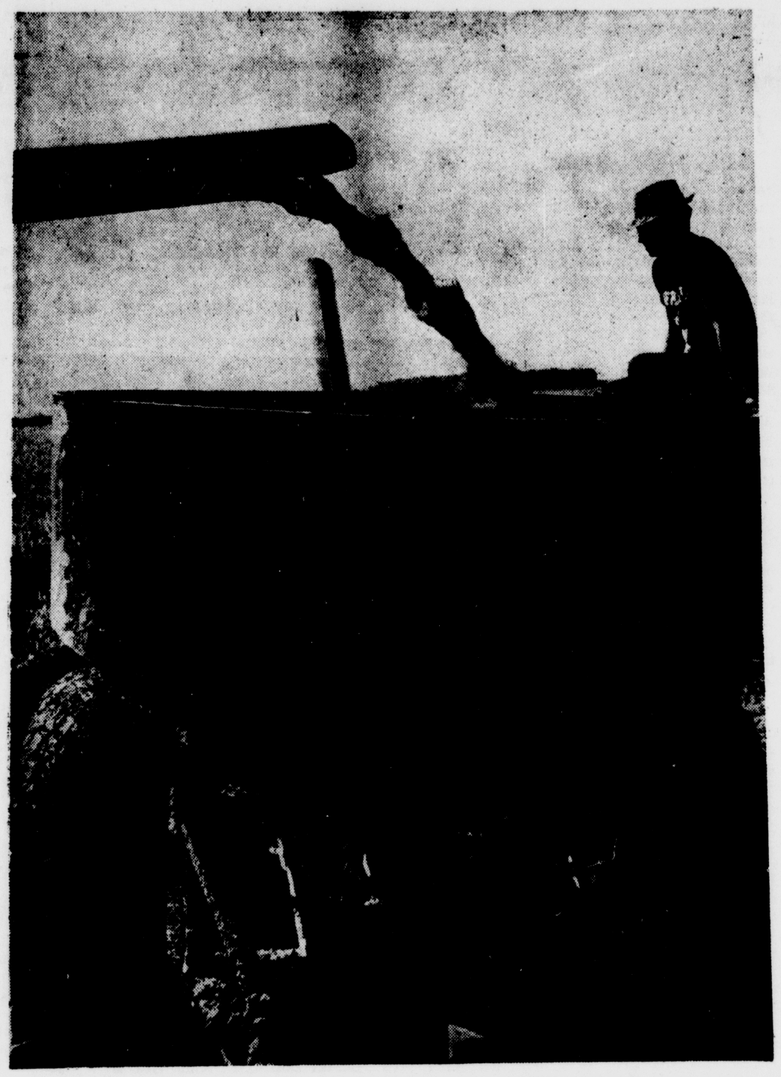
"You have to know what you are doing to raise rice," Duncan said. "You just don't plant it and harvest it...there is a lot to do in between times. No, I would have to day it is one of the most difficult crops in the world to raise properly."

The rice crop is rotated every year. This year the farmers are growing rice, next year they will switch to soybeans.

The farmers in this area begin harvesting about 11 o'clock each morning, after the dew has dried, and quit about 7 o'clock at night, or when the dew starts to form. They sell their crope, for the most part, to a packaging firm which markets the rice ready to cook.

Duncan, a local leader in soil conservation, does much traveling to conservation meetings throughout the country and, like many fellow farmers, takes samples of his crop to hand out.

"Everybody brings something to these meetings," he said. "Some bring potatoes or peaches or apples . . . I always take rice, and when I give it away the people look at it and ask me 'where did you say you were from? Not Missouri?' And I tell them that's right and they just can't believe that Missouri produces rice. Everybody thinks the Chinese have a corner on the market - it's not true."



AT A PRICE OF OVER $2.25 a bushel, the rice pouring into the hopper is a very profitable crop. The government keeps a tight rein on the amount of acreage that can be planted in rice in the Bootheel, but this year's yield will be about 125 bushels an acre. Dale Gorley, a farm hand, watches the rice shoot from the combine on the Duncan-Norwood farm.

A HEALTHY STAND of medium-grain rice was examined by the owners of the Duncan-Norwood farms, Wilburn Duncan (right), and George C. Norwood. The men spend many hours a day in the fields from May to October nursing the rice along. They say that while the final yield is worth the price, rice is a demanding crop to raise.

PUBLISHER LEASES THEATER

NEW YORK (AP) — A firm which first specialized in play publishing, then bought a weekly program service is now going into stage production.

"It seemed a natural step," says Barney Rosset, head of Grove Press.

A 10-year lease has been taken on off-Broadway's 162-seat Renata Theater. Slated for presentation are works by avant-garde and youthful writers which might otherwise be overlooked.

Rosset some months ago moved into theatrical activity by taking over the printing of playbills for off-Broadway shows.

FRESH AUDIENCES

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Theater activity is being encouraged here because the regional population keeps changing.

Elliot Martin, managing director of productions at two playhouses in the Music Center, reports that "there's a 20 per cent turnover every six months" in lists used to mail out notices to potential showgoers.

"The result," he says, "is that there's a constant segment of potential new audience arriving, and less chance of a decline in interest which is a problem in some communities."

EARLY OPTIMISM

NEW YORK (AP)—Before even arriving on Broadway, the Jewish National Theater of Poland is extending its engagement.

Originally booked for six weeks, the management rearranged the tour schedule so that two more weeks could be added.

Harold Leventhal, sponsor of the visit with Marie Desmarais, said the change was made because the Polish government was impressed with the strong advance ticket sale.

NOVELIST'S HOUSE RESTORED

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) – A private concern is restoring to its original appearance the house where Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The novel was credited with crystalizing opinion just before the Civil War. A $400,000 motel is being erected behind the Stowe house, a far cry from Uncle Tom's place.

House Stands Firm for Cut In Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) – The House emphasizes its determination to show President Johnson it means to see spending cut before taxes are raised– it passes that message to the Senate.

The House refused Wednesday, 226 to 173, to consider a $3 billion noney bill for the Labor Department and Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The reason: the Senate approved more spending than the President proposed for the two departments.

The action means a House-Senate conference committee must meet again to see if it can come up with a version satisfactory to the Senate and the economy-minded House.

Tuesday the House Ways and Means Committee set aside Johnson's bill for a 10 per cent income tax surcharge until there is concrete evidence that spending in this fiscal year will be slashed by $5 billion.

The House did vote Wednesday for a temporary appropriations bill financing until Oct. 23 several agencies which haven't received their annual money allotments yet. House Republicans made clear that further temporary measures would be opposed unless the $5 billion spending cut is assured.

Chairman George Mahon, D-Tex., whose Appropriations Committee may wind up proposing most of the spending cuts, said he wanted to know "whether the economy drive is skin deep or bone deep."

Pointing to a dilemma bound to arise when decisions on spending cuts are made, Mahon noted that Rep. Garner E. Shriver, R-Kan., didn't approve a spending reduction in the Labor-Welfare bill for aid to schools in defense installation areas.

Shriver explained this provision would affect his home state.

"The gentleman from Kansas is wanting to practice economy but not in his own district," Mahon said. "I must say we are all a little like that."

Many House members, especially Republicans, want Johnson to guarantee cuts before Congress appropriates. The administration argues Johnson can't cut until he knows exactly how much money he has to work with.

War Issue Splitting Ranks in Both Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential campaign, reaching a climax exactly one year from now, will be a mess for both parties if nothing changes in the war in Vietnam or in the public attitude toward it at home.

President Johnson, with his Democrats split on the war and public support for it dwindling, may not only have a tough time getting reelected but even renominated.

Republicans are split on the same subject. Just this week Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, Republican Senate leader who has steadfastly backed Johnson's Vietnam policy, rebuked Republicans he thought were too harsh on Johnson.

Those Republicans being mentioned as their party's likely presidential candidate are divided, too.

Last March, Johnson and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D.N.Y., widened their differences when the atter called for a bombing halt in Vietnam and Johnson said continuing the air strikes was imperative. Kennedy hasn't said much about it since.

While he denies presidential ambitions in 1968 and has publicly pledged support for Johnson, Kennedy has been gaining, and Johnson declining in public opinion polls on preference about the two men's candidacy.

This week the Gallup Poll showed 51 per cent of those quizzed favored Kennedy to 39 per cent for Johnson. Meanwhile, Johnson has been persistently belabored about the war by Democrats in Congress.

If there is no change in the war by October, 1968, Democrats will have a tormented time reconciling t eir differences. There will have to be some extraordinary flip-flops if the party hopes to look united.

But Republicans can read the polls. Some of them already have done some flip-flopping, an exercise which could be very convenient if public opinion on the war gets worse.

The No. example is Michigan's Gov. George Romney who for most of 1965 solidly backed Johnson on the war after a trip to Vietnam earlier that year. He began to get more strained and vague before the year's end.

Then he was on-again-off-again. Earlier this year he was saying the 1968 presidential candidate with the bes chance for election will be the one who convinces voters he can achieve peace "at a reasonably early date."

But when he reached the point of saying he had been "brainwashed" by government officials on his trip to Vietnam his standing in the polls started down.

New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, denying any intention of being a candidate, had supported Romney but his ratings in the polls steadily went up and this week the Gallup Poll had a new finding.

This was it: of those questioned, 55 to 41 per cent favored a Republican ticket led by Rockefeller and California's Gov. Ronald Reagan to a Democratic ticket with Johnson and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Maybe it was only a coincidence, but almost at the very moment this poll was disclosed Rockefeller, who had broadly supported Johnson's Vietnam policy, was reported saying privately he was shifting toward a more moderate position and was no longer wholeheartedly behind Johnson.

Asked about this later, he declined comment by saying he had said nothing about it and wooouldn't.

Reagan, a tough-liner on Vietnam, may be becoming a little more restrained, judging from recent statements of his, but not much. Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, whom the GOP's political pros like, has taken and stood by a hard line. In a recent interview he warned his fellow-contenders for the Republican nomination not to run on a platform of 'peace at any price."

And this week, Dirksen, without naming names, cautioned some of his fellow Republican Senators who have been most caustic about Johnson not to demean him for it means demeaning the "prestige of the republic." Dirksen has been steadfast in support of Johnson on the war.

EDA Hopes to Correct Rural Jobless Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government-business program aims to create industrial employment near home for jobless slumdwellers. But meanwhile an existing agency is working to keep the rural jobless from migrating to slums in the first place.

It tries to guide them to areas where work is available and visualizes a national job placement service.

The Economic Development Administration, set up two years ago as part of the Commerce Department, still isn't looking for overnight success.

Ross D. Davis, assistant secretary of commerce for economic development, said EDA programs are aimed at helping lagging areas reduce unemployment and increase incomes.

"The corollary must be that we will help stem and reverse the tide of migration that takes people to places where there are no jobs," he added.

EDA's Office of Policy Coordination said the flow of migrants from rural areas must be redirected to the medium and small-size cities where most new jobs are being created.

The plan involves job counseling, a comprehensive employment service and job retraining. Officials call the present federal-state employment service inadequate.

They want a network of employment services where jobs can be pinpointed throughout the nation and persons trained and directed to them.

This, officials said, will require a basic restructuring of the present employment service to provide data on jobs available not just locally but in many areas in the country.

EDA officials described as startling the projections it made for the growth of jobs in metropolitan areas.

Very small and very large areas, they said, will produce comparatively few new jobs in the future. The major growth will come in counties with a population ranging from 50,000 to 500,000 persons.

But unemployed persons from rural areas tend to concentrate in the big cities, officials said, where they feel the number of job alternatives are larger.

Dear Editor:

I would appreciate it if you will print the poem enclosed as a tribue to one of the best of men my husband, W. C. Zimmer.

Memories

Fourteen (14) years ago dear, many miles away.
We pledge our love forever, it was our wedding day.
For me years of contentment
For you I know the same
I'm thankful you are mine dear
And proud to bear your name.
You make my life worth living
With the comforts you provide
I'll ever more be grateful to have you by my side.
Happy anniversary love
You deserve the best in life
I loved you then, I love you now
From your devoted wife-Geneva

Series Cops High TV Rating

NEW YORK (AP) — Real baseball fans have a tendency to scoff at the capacity crowds that turn out for World Series games, contending that most of the people are there— and a lot of them occupying the best seats— just because it is a spectacle, not for love of the game.

The spectacle-lovers apparently abandon their soap operas and game shows in television, too, at World Series time, since a quick Nielsen check of the metropolitan New York area audience during Wednesday's opening game showed that 65 per cent of all sets in use were turned in on NBC's report of the goings-on in Boston.

The network concentrated lots of cameras, plenty of experts and statisticians for the opening game and acquitted itself handsomely. The color was good, the commentators restrained themselves from gabbing when the action slowed down. But the game itself was pretty much of a pitching duel which enchants the baseball fans but can be a bit of a drag for the World Series-watcher who can take baseball or leave it alone— and really prefers the latter.

What we nonfans enjoy is plenty of hitting and sliding and howling from the audience. When its mostly pitching, the game seems to move as slowly as the plot of a day-time serial.

Another of the quickie Nielsen reports on national viewing preferences— this one covering the week of Sept. 18— shows that the public still prefers feature film broadcasts to anything else on the television schedules. Five of the movie nights landed in the list of the 10 most popular programs.

Top show of the week was Rock Hudson-Doris Day film "Send Me No Flowers," on NBC, and CBS's broadcast of "The Apartment" was in third place. Among television programs— not including broadcasts of old movies— in the top 10 list were CBS's "Gomer Pyle" and "Andy Griffith Show," NBC's "Bonanza" and the "Bob Hope Comedy Special" and "CBS's "Lucy Show."

On the bottom of the list were NBC's Telephone Hour— low show among 80 rated. Others in the bottom five were ABC's "Good Company," CBS's News Hour, ABC's "Legend of Custer" and "Hollywood Palace," and NBC's "Accidental Family."

NEW YORK (AP) Ordered to disband and return to street cleaning and refuse collection, the Sanitation Department Band decided to play on.

The sanitation commissioner directed the 56-member band's swan song because of a severe manpower shortage in keeping the city clean. But the bandsmen, with the help of Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky, have booked themselves to play concerts for teenagers.

"They are doing this on their own time, free of charge," Stavisky said.

Meanwhile, City Councilman Frank X. Smith has mounted Operation Band Aid, an effort to keep the official departmental band intact.

Peru, Argentina May Buy Arms

NEW YORK (AP) - Two Latin American nations, overriding objections by the United States, are moving to buy modern arms from France, The New York Times reported.

The most significant sale is for 12 Mirage V fighter-bombers to Peru and the other involves the sale of 50 AMX - 30 tanks to Argentina, the newspaper said in a dispatch from Washington.

U.S. diplomats have been applying strenous pressure on Peru not to buy the supersonic jets out of fear that it might trigger a Latin American arms race, The Times said.

The report quoted U.S. State Department sources as saying conversations still were going on between the U.S. and Peru, but added that Peru already had signed a contract to purchase the planes from Marcel the French aircraft manufacturer.

It's true that swimmers cannot sink in the Great Salt Lake, but they do risk choking for the water is eight times saltier than the ocean.

Army Using BB Guns to Develop No-Aim Skill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is using BB guns to develop a soldier's skill at doing something a Western gunfighter reputedly did instinctively: hit a spinning dime in midair without aiming.

The no-aim technique has been dubbed "quick kill" and the Army says it is just the thing to use when suddenly confronted with a pop-up target or an enemy soldier in Vietnam.

And a BB gun, the same kind junior uses, is the easiest and quickest tool to get the point across, the Army says.

The principle behind "quick kill" is that when a person points his finger at something, the object, his finger and his eye fall into perfect alignment. The Army is attempting to make a soldier's rifle an extension of his pointing finger.

Montana Boy Scouts Get Own Ghost Town

LEWISTOWN, Mont. (AP) — About 500 boys have been given their own chunk of the Old West— a crumbling ghost town in Montana's North Moccasin Mountains.

Lewistown resident Glenn Morton, who for years had been buying portions of an abandoned town site in hopes of preserving it, first offered half of the original community of Kendall, north of Lewistown, to the State of Montana. When Montana officials declined his offer, Morton found an enthusiastic recipient in the North-Central Montana Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

The town is about to return to life. Wielding most of the tools the city's pioneer settlers used to search for gold, the youths will attack the dormant town, cleaning streets, resetting foundations, oiling doors and splashing a new coat of paint over cracked lumber.

"The boys aren't the only ones excited about the town," said Beryl Morris, Great Falls scout executive. "I think the prospect of owning a ghost town has revealed some of the 'boy at heart' among us adults."

Morris said plans for the area will be aimed at preserving its historical significance. "The boys will turn each of the old streets into trails with the same names they had when Kendall was a boomirg community," he said.

Right now Kendall is asleep. But the fever that drew 1,400 prospectors and their families, and the disillusionment that caused them to vacate the town are still there. The old feelings are still hidden in the depths of a concrete bank vault which was emptied of its last gold shipment when paydirt began to run scarce just after the turn of the century.

Morton, assured that his town now is in good hands, asks only that none of the stone ruins be torn down or dismantled. Retired, he is content to relax and watch a church become once more a church; to watch the city wells cleaned and once again yielding cold pure water, and most of all, to watch 500 boys bring youth to a city that was dying of old age.

Racing Rabbi Meets Teeners On Own Level

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) The rabbi told his father he was a drag racer and Dad said he thought being a rabbi was enough, "He didn't believe it was necessary for me to take additional risks."

Rabbi Robert Schectman, 28, of Beth El Temple tools around Springfield in a white souped-up 1966 Mustang called "Heavenly Hauler" which, he says, speaks louder to teen-agers than his sermons.

"I have been able to show these teen-agers that a religious person is a real person," he says. "To be religious doesn't mean that one must be withdrawn."

The rabbi is about as withdrawn as A.J. Foyt. His car can accelerate to 100 m.p.h. in 14 seconds and so far he's won drag competition in Colchester, Conn., and Lebanon, N.Y.

As he purrs around Springfield, he gets challenges from almost anybody on wheels. Rabbi Schectman tells them, "Sir, come down to the drag strip and I'll race you, not in the street."

The rabbi's pit crew comprises two Jews— Larry and David Solomon, 15-year-old twins— and a Roman Catholic, Peter Ford, 17.

The rabbi told his father, Rabbi Harry Schectman of Kingston, N.Y., not to worry about the risks of drag racing.

To the younger Schectman, drag racing is a part of the world created for man by God.

"The Jewish law directs man to enjoy life and to express an interest in many things and it also teaches us to develop skills to improve mankind," he says.

"To be able to use the power developed in the car is a way of asserting mastery of nature," he says. "There is the accomplishment of having made natural forces do what I, man, want."

Ford's Theater To Reopen After 102-Year Period

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford's Theater, its stage empty since President Abraham Lincoln was fatally shot while watching a play there 102 years ago, soon will echo anew the sounds of live theater.

The Interior Department said Wednesday that 1860-era plays will be presented at Ford's beginning early next year. The Ford's Theater Society, a nonprofit group, hopes to have a repertory group presenting a nine-month season beginning next Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday.

Announcement of the undertaking, helped along by a $250,000 grant from Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., came from Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall at a news conference in the partially refurbished theater six blocks from the White House.

Ford's has been closed to tourists since the Interior Department began in 1965 a $2.7 million restoration.

Backstage is still a tangle of scaffolding and wiring but the theater interior already exudes the aura of that day— April 14, 1865— when Lincoln was shot by actor John Wilkes Booth.

Separate cotton lace and damask curtains decorate the box where Lincoln and his wife sat watching a comedy, "Our American Cousin."

On the orchestra floor are replicas of the cane-bottomed chairs used at the time. Two curving balconies are partially equipped with the type of long benches on which patrons sat.

Ornate carvings on the balcony facades, winding slate-step staircases and wall and balcony candelabra— all reproduced from photos taken after the assassination— also are in place.

There also are some differences.

The theater will seat only 600 instead of the 1,700 it did in Lincoln's day. Udall explained the cutback involved stricter fire regulations and "the fact we found that people of this age require broader seats.

Also changed— and hopefully improved, said Udall— will be the theater's acoustics and backstage equipment.

McDonough Joins Copter Company

TAY NINH,--Army First Lt. Ranney W. McDonough, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walton R. McDonough, Morley, Mo., has been assigned to the 187th assault helicopter company near Tay Ninh, Vietnam.

McDonough, a rotary wing aviator, entered the army in August of 1966 and was last stationed at Ft. Rucker, Ala.

A 1961 graduate of Scott County Central high school, Morley, Mo., he was graduated from the University of Missouri at Rolla, Mo., in 1966 with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering.

He received his commission through the reserve officers' training corps program at the University.

His wife, Anna, lives at 327 Illinois Ave., Sikeston, Mo.

Court Petition Form Approved

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson has approved the form of a petition calling for an election on extending Missouri's nonpartisan court plan to St. Louis County.

Now the plan applies only to the appellate courts, the courts of Jackson County and St. Louis city.

The petition calls on St. Louis County election officials to put the court plan proposal on the ballot in the August primary election next year.

Under provisions of a bill passed by the 1967 legislature, opening the questions to the county's voters, the petition must have the valid signatures of legal voters equal to at least 5 per cent of the total vote cast in the last election for governor.

The attorney general also told Gene E. Voights, Clay County prosecutor, that a county may issue bonds for park purposes even though cities in the county already are taxing for parks.

State Auditor Haskell Holman was advised by the attorney general's office that a county school superintendent may not take pay from an individual school in the county. Anderson held that it is against public policy to give a public officer additional pay for performing official duties. He said it would be a conflict of interest.

The question was brought up by the auditor regarding approval by the school board of the R-4 district in Ripley County for a payment of $900 a year to the county superintendent.

Dear Mr. Blanton:
R. C. Martin says:

Any nation that practices the philosophy that one segment of that nation's society owes another segment of its society a living cannot long endure as a free nation.

This philosophy is against the laws of God. The Bible has never endorsed a doctrine of taking from a productive man and giving to the none productive.

There is a hidden nature in man that can never be satisfied. The more he has the more he wants. This also holds true to the recipients of charity. Try to satisfy the wants of the none productive and you will bankrupt the nation.

Sincerely,
R. C. Martin

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MISSOURI
Resolution

A resclution declaring the necessity for the construction of concrete curb and gutters on Benton Street from Warner Street to East Street, in accordance with plans and specifications, in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $1.65 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy fo this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 2nd day of October 1967. Approved: Kendall Sikes, Mayor; Attest: John W. Vaughn, City Clerk.

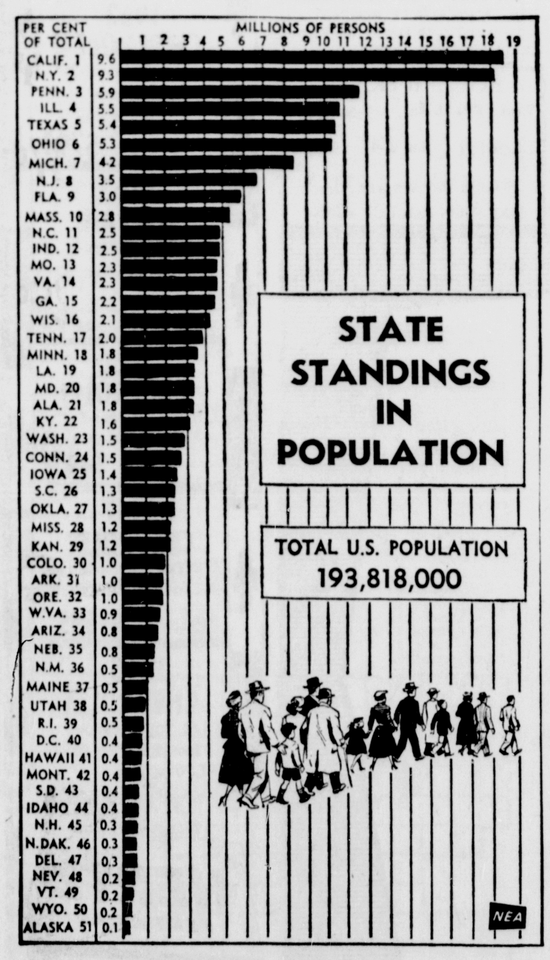
PARDON, MISS, but . . . Gussie Moran, who shocked the tennis world with her lace shorts several years ago, had nothing on Virginia Wade of Great Britain as she bent over to pick up a dropped racket during the United States National Tennis Tournament at Forest Hills, N.Y.

THE PORCUPINE LOOK seems to be in vogue for Elizabeth Taylor as she and her husband Richard Burton arrive at a masked ball at Rezzonico Palace in Venice. Celebrities from all over the world attended the ball, most extraordinary social event of the year, which raised around $30,000 for victims of last year's flood. The arrival of guests by gondola up the Grand Canal caused the world's most serious nautical traffic jam.



Though population in the United States has grown to nearly 200 million since the 1965 figures above were compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Census, state standings have shown little change from those shown here. California remains the leader in numbers, while Alaska, biggest in size, observes the centennial of its relationship with the United States with the smallest number of residents.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

Our school, or any other school for that matter, could likely count itself successful if we taught our students to read well and to acquire the desire to read or a habit of reading. None of the other skills which we teach are quite so important.

We make every effort to teach reading. The subject is given more attention than any other and generally most of our students learn to read reasonably well. The reading program is perhaps most intense at the beginning level, i.e.: first graders, and our teachers try to use the latest methods and materials. Our observation is that our elementary teachers do an exceptionally good job with this important subject. Reading above the elementary level, is no less important but is more on an incidental basis in that the student reads to acquire information relating to other subjects. Some reading is taught at the secondary level for those students who have more than usual difficulty. They are given a concentrated dose, using special techniques and equipment, some of the devices referred to as teaching machines as they aid the student to increase reading speed and comprehension.

Obviously students can't read unless there is material to read. More than normal attention has been given to our schools' libraries, this department being capably lead by Fred Huff, Director of Library Services; and Polly Hanks, librarian at Middle School and elementary principals and teachers given this responsibility at the elementary level.

According to an announcement which we got today from Fred Huff, there will be a special exhibit of books for junior and senior high school readers at the Senior High School library Monday, October 23 through Friday, October 27. The exhibit, representing 63 leading publishers and including several university presses, will be open daily from 7:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M., closing at noon on Friday. Students, teachers, librarians, parents and interested adults are urged to review the exhibit of 430 of the best and most recent books for the seventh to twelfth grade level.

The exhibit includes both fiction and nonfiction and there are books to enthrall, inform and instruct. Orders for those desiring copies can be made. The school does not profit, this is merely an added service through are library department. Naturally we are interested in helping to bring as much good reading material into the community as possible.

Next week, October 4-14 is Fire Prevention Week. Through the cooperation of Sikeston's effective fire department, special attention will be given to fire prevention education during the week. Incidentally, the fire stations will conduct "Open House during the week and all citizens are invited to visit with them. Regular fire drills are conducted in all of the schools and especially those where there is some degree of hazard in which case the drills are more frequent.

We are in receipt of a letter from Governor Warren Hearnes, sent out to all schools, calling attention to a state program designed to assist the 14,000 or so students, who unfortunately drop out of Missouri's schools each year. The proposed program is an arrangement whereby the Missouri State Employment Service is to be informed each time there is a school drop out. The employment service will then work with the drop out to suggest alternate courses of action, for example: a job, if this is possible, (and for the drop out it usually isn't), Manpower Training, Neighborhood Youth Corps, Job Corps or other means of completing his education and developing marketable skills. While the Board of Education attempts here to provide a program which will as nearly fit the needs of each student, with heavy emphasis on vocational education and has very appreciably reduced our drop out rate, even one drop out is a problem. The student who drops out of school without further education, as is suggested through the Governor's program, has two strikes against him. Usually he has not done well in school. (Sometimes this is as much the fault of the school as it is the fault of the drop out). He does not have marketable skills. He then joins the unemployed, or at best the under employed. Worse yet, he may become a social or legal problem as a result of his inability to find a job or to be successful in life. Attention to the potential drop out or the drop out at that particular point is extremely important. The use of more than an average amount of the taxpayers' funds to prevent the drop out or to further his education through some other channel can be a very wise expenditure. We commend the Governor for this program.

Former Oklahoma football coach, Bud Wilkinson, who later served as Physical Fitness Consultant to the late President Kennedy, charges that "Too many schools use a successful varsity team as a smoke screen for poor physical education programs." While we don't believe this is generally true, certainly some schools are inclined to give undue attention to the more glamorous sport program than they are to providing programs of physical fitness for all children. The general public is not without blame. We have noted that some citizens, even parents of school children, are more concerned about the success of the baseball, basketball or football teams than they are about the quality of the educational program which is provided for children. We can't remember much hue and cry to fire a mediocre English or mathmetics teacher but this is frequently the case when a coach has a losing season.

Boards of Education should provide a well-planned and executed program of physical fitness for every child according to his need. Special attention should be given to those children who are least physically fit or who have physical handicaps. Then programs of competitive sports, planned to involve as many students as are interested, should be on top of this. The student who has unusual ability or interest in athletics should have the opportunity to develop his interests and abilities just as the school should provide an intellectually challenging opportunity to the student with above average intelligence. But we would agree with Wilkinson, "the tail shouldn't wag the dog." Both physical education, for all, and a sound athletic program are important.

As information to parents who may wish to make medical or dental appointments or to plan a trip, we note here that school will be dismissed Thursday and Friday, November 2 and 3, for the annual Missouri State Teachers Association Convention to be held in St. Louis. School is dismissed when the state meeting is held in St. Louis, as it is every other year, in order that our teachers may attend this important professional meeting. On alternate years it is held in Kansas City and because of the distance, we do not dismiss school for the Kansas City meeting, as only a few of our faculty attend as delegates.

Ann Landers

Mother Asks Daughter to Approve Extra Marital Sex

Dear Ann Landers: My mother and I are only 18 years apart in age. She could easily pass for my older sister. Although I am only 16, I understand a lot about life and everyone says I am very mature for my age.

Recently my mother told me that Dad has lost all interest in sex. She says she is getting nervous and doesn't know what to do about it. Mom has asked my advice and I don't know what to tell her. She says there is a very nice, attractive man who works in the same office with her. He is married but does not care for his wife. Do you think it would be terrible if my mother got together with this man so they could fill out the empty spots in one another's lives? -- NO ANN LANDERS

Dear No: A mother who would discuss this problem with her daughter (even if they do look like sisters) has some loose parts in her head. It sounds as if she is looking to you for approval, not advice.

Tell your mother to seek professional counseling and to please leave you out of it. It's bad enough for a teen-ager to know that her mother is a swinger. To ask a child to be a party to such crummy business is too much.

Dear Ann Landers: I have something to say to all kids who are fed up with school and think they would be better of if they quit and got a job. The best way to get my idea across is to ask you to print this letter: "Dear John Doe, Jr.: I am sorry I had to turn you down this afternoon when you came to my office and applied for a job. Judging from the "so what?" expression on your face, I suspect you have been turned down before. Probably dozens of times.

"You seemed like a nice enough young man, neat and polite and willing, but you didn't have a high school diploma. I know you can read because you came to my office in response to an ad which appeared in the paper. Apparently you skimmed over the line which read, 'High-school Graduates.'

"The job you wanted has an excellent future. It offered unusual opportunities for advancement. I am sorry you didn't qualify. And now I would like to give you one bit of advice. Go back to school and graduate. That diploma is far more important than the car you are supporting. And, young man, if you can possibly go on to college, GO! You may feel it is a waste of time, but take my word for it, it is the smartest thing you can do. The world is changing and those who are not equipped to meet the new challenges will be left behind. Good luck -- THE MAN WHO HAD TO SAY NO"

Dear Man: I hope your message sinks into hundreds of thousands of skulls around the country. And now may I grab the tail of the kite and add a word of my own?

I have never had a letter from a reader saying he was sorry he stayed in high school and graduated, but I have had stacks of mail from dropouts begging me to get the word to other teen-agers for whom it is NOT too late. The word is, "Stay in school and graduate or you may find yourself hopelessly trapped in a dull, low-paying job for life."

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze and You--For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were The Judge

Attempting to Kill Corpse No Crime

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Three-fingered Tom had a long standing feud with Four-fingered Freddy. Instead of burying the hatchet, however, Tom decided to bury Freddy. Consequently, when he found him lying in peaceful repose on a couch one afternoon, he took advantage of the opportunity to pump five slugs into Freddy's back.

As it turned out, however, Tom had wastefully squandered his five bullets. For, when the coroner subsequently submitted his report, it revealed that Tom had inconsiderately died at least an hour before the shooting from natural causes.

Undaunted by the report, a determined district attorney nevertheless charged Tom with attempted murder.

"The D.A.'s crazy," Tom protested in court. "Freddy was already dead when I let him have it. Since you can't kill a corpse, I can't be convicted to attempting the impossible."

"The unfortunate state of Freddy's health at the time he was shot," retorted the district attorney, "has nothing to do with the case. What is important is that Tom intended to commit murder. And, he made the attempt. He was foiled by the fickle finger of fate. Therefore, he's guilty."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Tom of attempted murder?

This is how the Judge ruled: No! The Judge held that that it is no crime to attempt to murder a corpse since a corpse cannot be murdered. (Based upon a 1953 Springfield Court of Appeals, Missouri, Decision)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

MOTHERS HANDS ON PLOUGH

NEW DELHI (AP) — Women in rural India are going to learn the latest scientific agricultural methods.

The southern state of Madras has led the way by starting a one-week course training about 80 women at a time in better farming methods.

Mrs. Sraojini Varadappan, chairman of the Madras State social welfare board, who is conducting the course, said it was time women took up the challenge of India's chronic foodgrain deficiency.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, and it is time our hands are put to the plough," she said.

Funeral services for William R. Decker, a retired farmer, were held yesterday afternoon at the Baptist Church in Smith Addition.

The widening of East Center street and the placing of an area in the east part of Sikeston into the business district were included in actions taken last night by the city council in a regular monthly meeting. An ordinance was adopted placing all of that area from Moore avenue east to Lillian Drive and from Linn street north to a public alley, in the business district.

After 25 years on the Sikeston fire department, Milburn Arbaugh last night resigned as chief of the local department and his resignation was accepted by the city council.

Doyle Lackey, Forest Lackey, John Hodges and Leo Parks returned Sunday from Pala Camp, Minaki, Ont., Canada, after a successful two weeks hunting trip. Each man is credited with a deer and both Doyle and Forest Lackey killed a bear.

Lawyer Calls on U.S. to Improve Freedom Image

ST. LOUIS (AP)— The wealth of America is being created because of individual freedom, a Kansas lawyer told a Girl Scout group in St. Louis. He advised them to carry that message to the rest of the world and improve the American image.

Richard F. Hrdlicka, Hesston, Kan., was the keynote speaker Tuesday at the Region 8 Girl Scout conference.

He told the group that the people of the world are overwhelmed by the promotion of wealth in the United States and consequently do not hold the U. S. as "a bright, shining example of liberty."

Hrdlicka is a refugee from Czechoslovakia. He fled from behind the Iron Curtain in 1948.

Stone Promoted To Lieutenant Colonel

CHARLESTON -- Marshall Stone has been promoted to lieutenant colonel in the army reserve.

Stone, an infantry officer, began his military career by enlisting in headquarters company, 140th infantry, Missouri National Guard in 1936.

While serving three years active duty during World War II, Stone was commissioned in the army air corps as a bombardier - navigator assigned to the 47th bomb group.

After separation from active service, Stone accepted a commission in the national guard. He transferred to the army reserve in 1956.

Colonel Stone and his wife, Montell, live at 305 North Locust St.

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Oct. 5, the 278th day of 1967. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1954, Italy and Yugoslavia formally settled their dispute over the city of Trieste.

On this date—

In 1502, Columbus discovered Costa Rica.

In 1830, the 21st American president, Chester A. Arthur, was born.

In 1881, painter Pablo Picasso was born in pain.

In 1918, the allies announced that the Hindenburg Line had been broken during World War I.

In 1921, the baseball world series was broadcast by radio for the first time. The plays were described by sports writer Grantland Rice.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman asked Americans limit consumption of meat, eggs and poultry to build up a stockpile of grain for Europe.

Ten years ago — The Soviet Union disclosed that the satellite Sputnik 1 had passed over or near most of the world's major cities.

Five years ago — The United States completed a military withdrawal from Laos in accordance with an agreement ending a civil war there.

One year ago — The White House acknowledged that the United States was bombing the eastern sector of the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam.

checks for $5,000 and $10,000 and putting the balance in her checking account.

That day, they said, Mrs. Shearer and her husband Albert, a used car salesman, went to an automobile agency in La Habra and got a 1968 car for $3,700. The car was picked up the next day in return for a $5,000 cashier's check.

A day later, the Shearers returned to pick up a $1,300 check representing their change.

"The couple said they won the $5,000 at the races," a car salesman said.

Then Albert and Jaynee Shearer went to Las Vegas, Nev., for the weekend.

Only $5,000 or so of the $19,065 could be recovered, the district attorney's office said Wednesday.

The county auditor's office discovered the computer's error and issued a stop-payment order. The car was confiscated with only 28 miles on the speedometer.

Mrs. Shearer was quoted by investigators as saying she didn't know what the check was for and that, after she cashed it, she gave the balance of the money to her husband.

Shearer was quoted as saying only that he has none of the money now.

Bandits Pull $1.5 Million Robbery at du Pont Mansion

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Five armed bandits raided the palatial seaside estate of Willis Harrington du Pont early today, bound the family and servants and looted the house of $1.5 million Russian coin collection and some $34,000 worth of jewelry and cash.

Du Pont said the bandits told him they would hold the rare coin collection for $200,000 ransom. He at first estimated the worth of the collection at $500,000 but later increased the value.

Police said the men, all wearing cloth masks and gloves, entered the 33-room mansion through a back door at 12:15 a.m.

"They tied us up and threatened us as I guess all robbers do," Du Pont said. "But they didn't treat us roughly."

Du Pont, 31, said the family was upstairs when the men entered the house. "They woke us, tied us and started ransacking the house," he said. "I think they were basically after cash."

Capt. C. O. Huttoe, head of the police department's robbery detail, said the bandits used neckties to bind Du Pont, his wife, Miren, 29, and their 4-year-old son, Victor.

The three were herded into a bedroom along with the butler, Hans Hein, 55, and his wife, Rose, 50.

Du Pont said the robbers demanded the coin collection after they found 1,000 silver dollars in his safe, which he said he opened after being threatened.

"They figured I was a coin collector, I guess," he said.

In addition to the coin collection and the silver dollars, he said the robbers took five watches worth $5,000, some of Mrs. Du Pont's jewelry and an undetermined amount of cash.

After ransacking the house for two hours Du Pont said the men drove off in his 1967 Cadillac. He said the butler worked his hands free 20 minutes later and called police.

Du Pont found a $10,000 bill on the floor after the thieves fled and surmised they had either dropped it accidentally or discarded it on the theory it would be too hard to cash.

Huttoe said Du Pont told him the men were polite and used no excessive force although they did use "bad grammar."

During their stay in the house, Du Pont said the bandits helped themselves to a roast in the refrigerator and to a few bottles of soft drinks.

Du Pont said one of the bandits told him, "This is my first day on the job." He said the gang's leader asked the name of his attorney so he could contact him about exchanging the coin collection for $200,000.

The car in which the men fled was found a short time later in a church parking lot near the five acre estate where Du Pont built his $800,000 home Baymere, in 1964. The house faces Biscayne Bay in Miami's swank Coconut Grove section.

Du Pont, a trim, balding 6-footer, is the son of the late Lammot du Pont, president of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., Wilmington, Del. His wife is the former Miren K. de Anezola of Bilboa, Spain.

Du Pont holds ranching, aviation and citrus interests in Florida and is a prominent member of Miami's social set.

Yastrzemski Gives Boston 1-0 Lead

BOSTON (AP) - Carl Yastrzemski staked Boston to a 1-0 lead through the first 5 innings of today's second World Series game as the Red Sox sought to avenge Wednesday's 2-1 defeat at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals.

After drawing a walk in the first inning, Yastrzemski lined a drive into the right field seats for his first hit of the series leading off the bottom of the fourth inning.

St. Louis, meanwhile, was held hitless. Boston pitching ace Jim Lonborg retired the first 15 Cardinals in order.

Yastrzemski's homer was only the second hit off St. Louis rookie Dick Hughes. However, George Scott followed with a single and Jerry Adair beat out an infield hit before the fourth inning ended on a brilliant diving stop of Elston Howard's bid for a base -hit by Cardinal second baseman Julian Javier, who tossed to shortstop Dal Maxvill to force Adair at second and retire the side.

Longborg compiled a 22-9 regular season record.

Hughes, 29, who spent nine years banging around the Cardinals farm system before he finally made it this year as a rookie, took a 16-6 regular season record into his first Series start.

Manager Red Schoendienst made no changes in his Cardinal line-up, except for Hughes. The Red Birds became 3-1 favorites in the Series after winning the opener 2-1 on Bob Gibson's six-hit performance.

The lineups for today's game:

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) ---- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reappointed two members to the Missouri State Council on the Arts Wednesday.

They are Mrs. Marshall Craig, Sikeston, and Carl Burkel, Jefferson City. They will serve through Oct. 13, 1972.

Mrs. Craig has served one two-year term.

Senate Approves Antipoverty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed Thursday a $4,658,000,000 two-year extension of the antipoverty program.

The vote was 60 to 21.

Final action came after 11 days of Senate debate and a decision to strip from the measure a $2.8 billion emergency job program which its advocates said offered the best promise of fighting poverty.

The bill was sent to the House where the Education and Labor Committee has been struggling with a similar measure. Administration leaders conceded it faced a bitter fight there.

The final Senate version authorized $2,258,000,000 for the antipoverty programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity in the current year and $2.4 billion in fiscal 1969 starting next July 1.

The total for the current year is $198 million more than the $2.06 billion asked by President Johnson.

The Senate refused on a 50-36 vote earlier Thursday to cut this $198 million out of the measure.

The bill, once it is signed into law, still must be followed by an appropriation for the present fiscal year.

The bill represents a complete rewriting of all of the important sections of the OEO act by a Senate Labor subcommittee which has conducted a comprehensive study of the program lasting several months.

However, all of the present antipoverty projects would be funded by the bill including the Job Corps, the Neighborhood Youths Corps, Community Action which covers such programs as Head Start for preschool children, rural loans and aid to migrant workers, assistance for small business in poverty-stricken areas, work training programs for welfare recipients, and the VISTA program (Volunteers in Service To America).

Woman Goes on Spree With $19,000 Error

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Investigators say a suburban housewife took a $19,065 check issued in error by a county computer and promptly spent the money in one big, wonderful weekend in Las Vegas.

Jaynee Shearer, 37, was jailed on a grand theft charge and released Wednesday night on $1,100 bail.

Since 1963 she has received $15 a week in child support from a former husband now living in Atlanta, Ga. The man sent the money to Los Angeles court trustees, and the county issued $15 warrants to Mrs. Shearer.

Here is how the affair was described by investigators:

The $19,065 was delivered to her home in suburban Montebello on Sept. 27, and investigators say Mrs. Shearer took it to her bank immediately.

There she cashed it, investigators said, drawing cashier's

Items Taken From House

A 12-gauge Stevenson shotgun, several coins and clothing valued together at $187.17 were reported stolen Wednesday night from the O. W. Krapf residence at 843 Lora.

Investigating officer Sgt. Thurman Burns Jr. reported that the house apparently was entered through an unlocked door from the carport leading to the kitchen.

The theft occurred between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Wednesday Krapf told police.

Cabinets in the kitchen had been ransacked, but the items missing were taken from a bedroom on the southeast corner of the house, police said.

Among the coins taken were 12 silver dollars, 20 Kennedy half dollars and 22 Indian head pennies. Police are investigating.

A car driven by James H. Marshall, 65, 322 Luther, struck the rear of an automobile driven by Donna Ray, 17, 401 Missouri at 3:50 p.m. Wednesday on West Malone in front of Cream Castle, 801 West Malone police reported. Miss Ray had stopped to make a left turn prior to the accident. No one was injured.

Police received a report early today that a woman living in the 300 block of Bynum had received some annoying phone calls.

Herbert C. Reno, 138 North West St., was charged by police at 7 p.m. Wednesday with public intoxication on East Malone.

Tom Ancell Gross, Sikeston, who was arrested early Tuesday and charged with public intoxication also was charged with escaping custody. Gross had been working as a trustee in early September following an arrest on a public intoxication charge and walked away.

Curtain to Rise on 'The Man Who Came to Dinner'

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" a zany comedy about a man who slips on the steps at the house to which he was invited for dinner and stays for a month, is the first season offering of the Sikeston Little Theatre at 8 p.m. Friday in the junior high school. It will be presented again at the same time Saturday.

The three-act comedy was written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman.

Action centers on Sheridan Whiteside, a critic, with, playwright, and radio commentator, who takes over the Ernest Stanley residence after his accident.

Richard Fussell, a teacher in vocational education, plays Whiteside.

So completely is the takeover, that Lynn Colley as Ernest Stanley soon wants to eject Whiteside, who has filled his basement with penguins, a mummy case and an octopus.

A parade of bizarre characters including movie stars, a professor with a roach farm and 22 Chinese students, who have to go to the bathroom, are among Whiteside's friends, who drive Mr. Stanley out of his dining room and upset his household.

Fred Brockwell, a bank examiner, is assistant to Sam Harbin as director of the play. Brockwell plays two of the bizarre characters, who come to the Stanley home to see Whiteside.

Brockwell and his wife, Carolyn, who plays the part of a glamorous movie star, were active in Little Theatre groups in Del Rio, Tex. and the Azores Islands before moving here.

One subplot of the play focuses on the romantic involvement of a newspaperman, played by Allen Harris, and Whiteside's secretary, played by Judy Greer.

Another subplot deals with Stanley's children, played by Paul Parmenter, who wants to be a photographer and Mrs. Walter Shipley, who wants to marry a young man played by Bill Lashmet.

Walter Shipley, Charleston, plays Whiteside's physician, who is writing a book.

Michael Lee plays Banjo, a Hollywood friend of Whiteside. Harriet Stanley, a former ax murderer is played by Mrs. Bert Rowe Sr. and Mrs. Richard Fussell plays Whiteside's private duty nurse.

Sets for the production were designed and built by Jean Love.

Seven Seek Memphis Mayor Post

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — State Rep. A. W. Willis, seeking to become the first Negro mayor of this old South city, pegged his hopes on a quick victory today that would preclude a runoff.

Willis, first Negro elected to the Tennessee legislature since the Populist period early in the century, faced six white candidates in today's voting and has been given a mathematical chance of receiving a majority of the votes cast.

But unless he does, the odds are slim that he will become the first popularly elected mayor of a major Southern city.

If no candidate receives a majority of the votes today, the top two will meet in a runoff Nov. 2.

In the final week before election Mayor William B. Ingram Jr., and City Commissioner Hunter Lane Jr., both of whom have had substantial Negro support in the past, increased their wooing of these voters.

American Dead and Wounded Total Tops 100,000 in Vietnam Conflict

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command announced today that the number of American dead and wounded in the Vietnam war has passed 100,000.

The weekly casualty report came simultaneously with reports on one of the heavier days of air raids on North Vietnam with Air Force, Navy and Marine pilots hitting the port of Haiphong, two MIG airfields and two bridges near the Red Chinese frontier.

The U.S. Command disclosed the loss of three American planes over the North Tuesday and Wednesday, a period when the Hanoi government claimed 15 aircraft were downed.

Some sharp ground fighting was also reported, with 42 guerrillas killed in one series of skirmishes and air strikes.

The casualty report listed 150 Americans killed and 1,758 wounded last week and said 1,155 Communists were killed.

The latest total, reflecting the lethal artillery exchanges with Red gunners across the demilitarized zone, pushed American casualties in the war to 101,034, including 13,643 killed, 86,635 wounded and 756 missing, by unofficial count.

At the current casualty rate, the Vietnam war will surpass the Korean conflict in six months and become the fourth deadliest war in the nation's history.

The intensification of the war, despite the absence of many large-scale ground actions, was reflected in the headquarters report of 53 ground sweeps in progress and new targets hit for the first time in North Vietnam.

American pilots returning from Wednesday's strikes deep into North Vietnam's heartland reported meeting heavy antiaircraft fire, barrages of Soviet-built ground-to-air missiles and harassing flights of MIG jets. There was one brief dogfight in which no hits were scored. The MIGs nipped at the heels of American bombing formations and then sped to safety when a fight loomed.

In two days, North Vietnamese gunners on the ground shot down two Navy A4 Skyhawks, with one pilot rescued and the other missing, and one Air Force F105 Thunderchief, with the pilot missing, the U.S. Command said. It now has announced a total of 687 warplanes lost over the north.

Wednesday's 118 air missions began with Marine raids in the early morning darkness against MIG airfields at Hoa Lac and Kien An within the Hanoi-Haiphong air defense network.

Air Force pilots swept within 10 miles of Red China for the second straight day to blast the previously cut Lang Son bridge on the northeast supply route from the capital of Hanoi.

Navy pilots raked the previously hit Kien An highway bridge in Haiphong, only 1.7 miles from the city's center, and for the first time bombed the single-lane Chien Chiang highway bridge 15 miles below the Red Chinese frontier.

The Chien Chiang bridge, previously on the Pentagon's list of restricted targets, is on a secondary east-west road northeast of Haiphong. Normally unimportant, it could serve as a bypass route if the supply traffic in Vietnam's northeast corner became tangled.

It appeared one goal of the air raids was to clutter North Vietnam's supply system and to do as much damage as possible before the monsoon winds shift this month. The winds will bring rains and heavy weather almost daily and preclude the day-by-day pounding of many targets.

American planes attacked bridges 10 to 15 miles from China, and a nearby railroad yard, Tuesday.

In addition to the major targets, American pilots raked supply lines in the Hanoi-Haiphong area, bombed both rail lines leading from Hanoi to Red China, hit many antiaircraft and missile sites and harassed the waterways carrying barges south.

At the rail yard at heavily defended Kep, northeast of Hanoi, an estimated 50 rail cars and two locomotives were found. When the bombers left 25, rail cars were destroyed.

Eight-engine B52 bombers still were dumping tons of explosives in the demilitarized zone area despite a 10-day slackening of heavy North Vietnamese artillery attacks on U.S. Marine outposts overlooking infiltration routes below the DMZ.

Headquarters said U.S. air and artillery firepower had broken the back of the Communist artillery assault but Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, said he felt the Reds would try again.

Marine headquarters at Da Nang reported that Communist gunners fired 29 artillery and mortar rounds on Marine bases just below the DMZ Wednesday. Four Marines were killed and seven wounded.

Lt. Gen. William Momyer, recently described it this way: "As you well know, the targets come down to me from my next higher headquarter, PACF (Pacific Air Force, Honolulu), and he gets his targets from CINCPAC (Commander in Chief Pacific), Adm. Sharp's (Adm. Ulyses Grant Sharp) headquarters. And Obviously Adm. Sharp makes recommendations to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff send the targets back to him."

While noting there were off-limits targets which could be hit, Momyer added: "I look at my job here as taking what is given to me and doing the best I can with it."

Momyer's comments reflect the dispute now raging over the assignment of targets in North Vietnam and the restrictions on air power. At the command level in Vietnam, officers almost universally feel they should have more freedom in selecting targets.

Privately, they accuse Washington of frequently playing a numbers game. For instance, Washington will say that such and such a target was on the list submitted by field commanders and was bombed and consequently the field commanders should be happy. But the officers point out, Washington does not add that no follow-up raid was authorized.

The air commanders in Vietnam have wide latitude to assign targets in relatively non-sensitive areas of North Vietnam. But for the big targets, the frag orders filter all the way down from the secret war rooms in Washington where decisions are made by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, with President Johnson looking over their shoulders.

The filtering process is long and frustrating. The 7th Air Force commander in Vietnam, SAIGON, (AP) -- In the small hours each morning the muffled tapping of teletype machines in carrier ready rooms and Air Force operations shacks signals the beginning of another day's bombing raids on North Vietnam.

Operations officers at bases in Thailand and Vietnam and aboard the giant carriers in the Tonkin Gulf get the teleprinter "frag orders" outlining the day's missions.

once when the air power planners would like to hit them repeatedly. Air power planners also say it sometimes takes frustratingly long to clear some targets like the Hanoi-Haiphong rail line.

In addition to wanting permission for follow-up raids, the fliers still have some prime unhit targets on their lists.

Foremost among these are the MIG airfields at Phuc Yen and Gia Lam. Phuc Yen is now the main MIG base in North Vietnam and the area also shelters the Russian - Chinese - North Vietnamese Air defense center. Gia Lam is the main civil airport for Hanoi, in addition to being a MIG base and airfield comparable to Saigon's jammed Tan Son Nhut.

The port facilities at Cam Pha have been hit only once, and this is North Vietnam's third biggest port and the center from which coal is exported to the Communist bloc (about North Vietnam's only export). The second biggest port of Hon Gai has never had its dock facilites hit although warplanes have struck nearby installations.

The buffer zone near the Chinese border, about 25 miles wide, is rarely penetrated despite such well publicized raids as one recently which dropped a bridge only seven miles from the frontier.

Haiphong's port facilities, of course, are the biggest untouched plum. And within the Haiphong-Hanoi areas are some big storage dumps equally untouched.

In recent weeks, American planes have ranged up and down the two main rail lines which radiate northeast and northwest from Hanoi to the border of Communist China. The targets on these major supply arteries have been mainly bridges, rail yards and rail sidings -- many of them attacked for the first time and some close to the Chinese frontier. The closest so far was the strike against the bridge seven miles from the border and less than one minute away as the jet flies.

From January through July this year, U. S. fighter-bombers have averaged 13,000 sorties -- individual strikes -- per month over the north. Three quarters of these sorties were against roads, rail lines, trucks -- the lines of communications and the supplies moving on them. Officials estimated 1,900 fixed targets have been attacked including bridges, troop barracks, oil storage tanks and power plants.

Air policy spokesmen in Vietnam, aware of the pressures from Washington, won't talk about numbers of percentages in relation to targets which have been hit or should be hit.

Almost unanimously, however, they will say privately that the policy of using air power in piecemeal bits is not the way they would like to fight the war.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Fear of misinterpretation of our Girl Scout editorial of Tuesday evening this was for this girl scout area and not just for the city of Sikeston as Sikeston's part is included in the United Fund drive - we are sorry we could have misled.

Sikeston residents, who have wondered whether they wanted cable television, soon can check with citizens of the up and coming city of Malden.

Malden has a city government more willing to let television viewers have what they want.

While the Sikeston City fathers drag their feet on any proposal to introduce better viewing and a wider selection of programs, Malden prepares to be served by Cotton Hill Cablevision.

Service men now are making the necessary hookups with a prospect that viewing may begin Oct. 15. Subscribers will be able to tune in six channels, FM radio music and a weather channel. Among the television programs offered will be ABC from Jonesboro, Ark.; NBC from Memphis, ABC from Memphis and St. Louis. Of course the picture from Paducah and Cape Girardeau will be improved.

Whether one Sikeston resident wants cable television or 5,000 desire it is of no concern to us.

What we do desire is that Sikeston people should have the opportunity under this country's free enterprise system to buy the service if they want it.

The failure to make it available is a restraint of competition as well as a denial of a service that many Americans even in the largest cities have been willing and eager to buy.

Why restrict Sikeston residents to what Paducah, Cape Girardeau and Harrisburg, Ill., television stations have to offer?

Or why restrict the residents to inferior viewing of these stations when a better picture is available from all of them particularly on color telecasts?

The answers must come from the city administration, which continues to exercise a curious attitude of conservative timidity on the matter. Who is being protected from whom?

TAXING THE ADS

A court test of the new Iowa tax on advertising is almost inevitable, but probably not before the new levy goes into effect on Monday, October 2. The tax law was hammered out in closed-door sessions of legislative leaders of both parties with Democratic Gov. Harold Hughes and rushed through the legislature with little debate.

The Iowa Tax Commission admits to be in a state of confusion about the new law. Lack of legislative guidelines on administration will make enforcement difficult. The legislature decreed only that the sales tax be levied on gross receipts of advertising in newspapers, directories, shoppers' guides, magazines, radio and television, movies, billboards, and "point of purchase" outlets. The Iowa Press Association and the Iowa Broadcasters Association individually are preparing court challenges.

The tax rate is 3 per cent. At present only Arizona taxes advertising -- at half the Iowa rate. And the Arizona law is a good deal less comprehensive than the law about to become effective in Iowa.

THE HIGH COST OF VETERANS

The cost of war does not end with the cessation of hostilities. For decades thereafter, veterans payments and services remain a fixed government expense. The Veterans Administration now spends around $6.6 billion a year for medical care, pensions, various types of compensation, and related services for former members of the armed forces. In addition, the Defence Department will spend about $2 billion in fiscal 1968 for retirement pay. Thus, more than six cents of every dollar spent by the federal government goes to veterans.

Veterans will claim an even larger portion of federal expenditures starting Sunday, Oct. 1. That is the effective date of the Veterans Pension and Readjustment Act of 1967, approved by both houses of Congress without a single negative vote. The law is expected to increase veterans benefits by about $260 million in its first year.

Nearly one-half of all Americans will share in the new or improved benefits -- around 26 million veterans, their wives and children, and veterans' widows. Persons already receiving VA pensions will get cost-of-living increases; "Viet Nam era" veterans and their families will be eligible for a wide range of death and medical benefits; and educational assistance under last year's Cold War GI Bill will be increased.

Pensions for Viet Nam veterans are expected to cost only $1 million in the first year, since the average age of returning servicemen is only 24 years. But as these men grow older and develop disabilities, the cost will rise steeply. Some Washington officials estimate that federal payments to Viet Nam veterans will total $2 billion a year by the end of the century.

NEW YORK (AP) — Goals are a necessary part of life.

If you have no goals, you rust to death.

If you have too few goals, or goals too easily gained, you wind up bored and cranky.

Of course, it is also possible to have too many goals, so many that they leave you confused and frustrated, undecided which to pursue and which to abandon.

Therefore it's a good idea to have two kinds of goals: real goals and daydream goals.

Real goals are the ones you sweat to make true. Daydream goals are more fun. They are the fantasies that tease the mind, things you've never done and probably never will.

Looking over my own list of unwon daydream goals, I find that I have yet to—

Hypnotize a charging rhinoceros with a single glance.

Eat a bird of paradise under glass.

Get the girl who brings coffee around our office to let me open a charge account.

Wallow in a European spa.

Beat my wife three times in a row at gin rummy.

Make a hole in one at golf.

Sip bean soup in the U.S. Senate's lunchroom, or champagne from the slipper of Julie Andrews.

Rent a real live gorilla as a subway bodyguard.

Finish a book written by Proust, Thomas Mann, James Joyce or Kathleen Windsor.

Build a more stately mansion for my soul, as the swift seasons roll.

Get anything back for a box top that was worth the quarter I also enclosed.

Receive a written apology from an Internal Revenue agent for the honest mistakes I made while following the advice of my barber on how to fill out my 1948 income tax.

Attend a testimonial dinner to a gall bladder surgeon given by his grateful patients.

Receive a standing, 10-minute ovation for any speech I've made to our local PTA.

Permanently fix any leaky faucet.

Lose an ounce while on a "quick, easy diet, guaranteed to melt pounds away as if by magic."

Go on a whale hunt and be the first to call, "Avast, mates, thar she blows."

Make a martini dry enough to satisfy all the hydrophobes who come to any cocktail party I throw.

Cook a wolf or pickle a herring.

Dissolve an expensive pearl in wine and offer it to a lovely lady with the remark, "Baby, when you go with me, you go first class."

Play a solo on the bongo drums at Carnegie Hall.

Land a job as a traveling salesman demonstrating skin decals at nudist conventions.

Save a millionaire from drowning and be asked to name my own reward.

MISDIRECTED IDEALISM

An officer of one of our leading oil companies, who formerly was chancellor of a great university, finds that misdirected campus idealism threatens "a real disservice to the national interest" in a little noted area.

The basis of this is evidence that a great many of today's undergraduates have little enthusiasm for careers in business. They equate corporate activity with sterility. So, as the spokesman puts it, "The prospect of our most promising youth all hastening into research, teaching, government, and solving the problems of peace, poverty, and race relations, leaving to the pedestrian and second-rate the management of the economic engine on whose product all these other activities depend for their ultimate support is a sobering one."

As he goes on to say, the guidance of corporate affairs is among the most challenging and exciting of activities. The corporation, to quote him directly again, ". . . is the instrument by which scientific discoveries are converted into something of social value and utility and made available to all the people." It is the mainstay of a free society. It is the source of our economic strength and power. And, through its work, the road to a better world is pushed forward.

KEEP THE SWORDS BLUNTED BY WORDS

Though he would never admit it to his editor, many a reporter has found coverage of United Nations proceedings a delightful assignment. The droning talk of the diplomats exerts a powerful soporific effect which the soft seats in the hall do nothing to dispel.

Many people who watched the Security Council's deliberations on the Middle East crisis over their television sets may well be inclined to agree.

But it is to be hoped that the United Nations continues to talk about the problem. And talk. And talk. If this seems futile, we can only repeat Churchill's famous statement that jaw-jaw is better than war-war.

On the assumption that a great deal of bluffing is involved in the menacing developments that have taken place in the Middle East, the longer the diplomats talk, the sounder the whole world will sleep.

Wonder where the carrot tops went? Nowhere, say experts of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. They're probably still in the field. Carrots are now harvested and packaged at the point of production. Because you get them without their tops, you get carrots cheaper. It costs less to ship them.

REVOLUTION CLOSE TO HOME

Not long ago Fidel Castro was host in Havana to a conference of Latin American communists. The theme sounded throughout the meeting was: "The duty of all revolutionaries is to make revolutions."

Castro wants and expects to see communist governments established in a number of Latin American countries. He looks ahead, no doubt, to the day when Panama may be the operator of the Panama Canal. His revoutionaries would have a simple task of taking over the Canal once the Americans are squeezed out.

Another meeting, again in Havana, for Castro's War of Revolution is planned for next January. It is to be called "A Cultural Congress of Asian, African and Latin American Writers, Artists and Scientists." Its prime function will be to whip up propaganda for the policy of revolution set at the August conference.

Castro and his communist revolutionaries have our entire hemisphere on the defensive. The path to revolution is being paved by Cuban guerrillas throughout the whole of Latin America. The countries to the south have experienced many revolutions. Traditionally they take place in the capital city. By contrast, Castro's agents concentrate their subversive activity in the countryside, just as the Red Viet Cong do in Vietnam.

Today, nearly nien years after Castro came to power, he seems as firmly entrenched as ever, and an even greater threat to the peace of the Americas. He continues to get aid from the Soviet communist bloc at the rate of about $2.6 million a day. Communists everywhere in the world work together in their drive to overthrow freedom. HLH.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

CHEYENNE -- Twenty years ago almost to the month, I traveled through Wyoming collecting boxcars of food for Western Europe. Last week I rode over part of the same route, this time going west, not east.

Twenty years had made some changes. The snow-capped peaks of the rockies were just as majestic, their necklace of aspens in the valleys just as golden, their pine-tree jewels along the timberline just as green. The antelope were just as aloof, just as curious.

But Ed Bailey, who traveled with us as superintendent of the Union Pacific before is president of that mighty railroad today. Dr. R. J. Stapleton of Green River, who handled the collection of food for the Friendship Train in Western Wyoming, is still going strong, but Tracy McCraken, State Chairman, is dead now. Succeeding him as publisher of the Wyoming newspapers is his son, Bob McCracken, who every year masterminds the Treagle train (sponsored by the Tribune and Eagle in Cheyenne), which we rode on this autumn day from Cheyenne to Larmie to see Wyoming University's cowboys edge out the Colorado State Rams.

Teno Roncalio, the ex-bootblack who 20 years ago was down to meet us shivering in the snow of Rock Springs, along with the bare-kneed high school band, had gone on to become famous as a congressman in Washington, defeating the grandson and great great grandson of two U.S. Presidents, William Henry Harrison.

AMERICAN BRAND POLITICS

Politics is just as absorbing today as it was 20 years ago. Congressman Harrison, who returned to his old job in Washington after Roncalio ran for the U.S. senate, was on the train and there were no harsh words between him and the son of the Italian immigrant coal miner who once defeated him.

Nor were there between Sen. Gale McGee, Democrat and Rep. Charlie Halleck of Indiana, the Republican leader. They joshed each other publicly about having "come clean" from Washington. Halleck said he was a "coin collector" and tried to collect all the coins he could. Sen. McGee said he "wanted Drew Pearson to know that I paid for my own ticket from Washington."

Remarked John Banner, the bulky TV Sergeant, Schultz of "Hogan's Heroes," "Where would you find such political Camaraderie between political rivals, except in America?"

Passengers on this train were just as interesting as those of 20 years ago, a cross section of the state: 700 doctors, lawyers, newspaper editors, ranchers, merchants; John Bell, who runs 4,000 head of herefords on his vast acreage around iron mountain; Gov. Stanley Hathaway, who knows the first name of almost every citizen in his state; George Guy, who studied under Judge Thurman Arnold, the old trust-buster, at the University of Wyoming Law School.

A lot of people knew Thurman Arnold. He had been mayor of Laramie, the only Democrat in the Wyoming legislature and a captain in the Wyoming National Guard when it went off to fight with pershing in Mexico in 1916 and later in World War I.

There was a lot of conviviality aboard the Treagle train last week, and also a lot of talk of wars -- World War I, in which some had fought; World War II, in which more had fought; and now the war in Vietnam. People didn't like the last war. They didn't like any of the wars for that matter, but they figured the first two were necessary.

"IS GENEROSITY DEAD?"

It was George Guy who asked me what was on a lot of people's minds: "Do you think you could get people to contribute to another Friendship train today?"

I doubted it. The friendship train in 1947 had preceded the Marshall Plan; and Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, the Republican who helped Harry Truman get congressional approval for the Marshall Plan, cited the train as evidence of how the American people felt about helping Europe.

This was followed by foreign aid to many parts of the world in the greatest outpouring of generosity, government to government, mankind has ever seen. It saved many countries from starvation and revolution, left bridges, dams, irrigation projects, schools and hospitals behind.

But it also left armies, dictatorships and military juntas, equipped by U.S. aid, and some of them have been neither helpful nor grateful to the American people. Dictator Franco of Spain, supposedly the No. 1 anti-communist, is the chief supplier of aid and trade to Fidel Castro, No. 1 communist in the Western Hemisphere.

Then there is Charles DeGaulle. I suppose De Gaulle has done more to sour American generosity than any other one man in the world today.

In the railroad station in Cheyenne stands the boxcar of the French Gratitude train. It once held "Quarante Hommes, Huit Chevaux" (forty men, eight horses) in the days when Capt. Thurman Arnold was marshaling the Wyoming National Guard up the faltering railroads of France to the muddy battlefields of Verdun, Chateau - Thierry and the Argonne.

Today the old boxcar stands in the Cheyenne station as a token of friendship from the French people, not the government; people who deeply appreciated American generosity and sent an entire "Merci Train" in response.

But the car's brightly colored coats of arms designating the French provinces have been stolen, just as the politicians have stolen large segments of goodwill to us for their selfish gain. And the paint is peeling, just as American - Franco friendship in De Gaulle's day has been eroding.

No, it would be difficult to launch another successful Friendship train. And what this means is that the American people are rapidly drifting isolationist. It was from the isolationist withdrawal of Americans from international affairs after World War I that World War II began.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

TAKES A WALK

Reuther Bolts Labor's Pro-Johnson Political Machine.

Washington, D.C.: -- Embattled Walter Reuther, never one to devote himself to a single campaign at a time, has now quietly plunged into do-it-yourself national politics.

The Detroit "redhead" now has definitely bolted the ardently pro-Lyndon Johnson AFL-CIO political organization -- just as its leaders meet almost daily to plan for next month's and next year's elections.

By this time of the year his United Automobile Workers (UAW) traditionally would have paid some $120,000 in "quota" donations to the big federation's Committee on Political Education (COPE). He has not paid a penny.

By this time his far-flung union locals would have been exhorted to swing into vital election drives in several states (New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, for example) where the 1967 results could have heavy impact on the '68 presidential election. There has been only a very noisy silence.

By this time he would have dispatched hundreds of thousands of UAW members' names to the COPE computer center (the Machinist union's $1 million Univac III) in preparation for the '68 Congressional and presidential drives. He has refused to send along a single name.

Though it is not known outside labor's inner sanctum, AFL-CIO President George Meany wrote to all international union presidents for their membership lists in eight states where labor's political strategists will campaign scientifically on an electronic data processing basis.

In recent elections the electronic thinking machines operated statewide only in Pennsylvania. Now the decision is to move the gadgetry into six other states: Maryland, Ohio, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas and California (and the District of Columbia). Reuther has massive membership in these states.

For years Reuther has championed such computerized campaigning.

But he turned Mr. Meany down flat. No names, no money, no cooperation.

His former union brethren point out that the $120,000 is merely a bag of peanut shells compared to what the UAW has in its own Citizenship Fund--which cannot be used as strike relief, for which almost $150 million will be available if needed.

But the list of names would only have cost the UAW a few dollars in postage.

So Reuther's former colleagues in labor's high command reckon he's building an independent machine, or a party, or a precinct - by - precinct community action crusade with an "opening to the left."

This could be based on his virtually unobserved million-dollar Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty, of which he is chairman.

In sophisticated labor circles it is noted that he has not lined up with the pro - Lyndon Johnson forces inside the overheated Americans for Democratic Action (ADA). His voice is loud and clear and influential when he unleashes it at ADA gatherings. But he has not attended recent board meetings. Nor did he dispatch any message to the ADA board people urging them to down the dump-Johnson drive.

Reuther has powerful influence inside that intellectual mix of university people, reformers and labor leaders. He could have influenced enough board members, or at least prodded them, to come out and vote to dilute the razor - edged criticism of President Johnson. But he made no move. Other labor leaders who, like "Walter," contribute heavily to ADA's always empty coffers tried to protect the President. Reuther did not budge.

Few inside labor are predicting he will bolt the President's camp as he has labor's tent. But neither is anyone--including those high in the UAW--prognosticating that he won't take a walk.

He could run an independent political machine which would be a party in everything but name. He could insist that some of his own union people be nominated for top offices by the Democrats. Last year, some Michigan Democrats urged Reuther's colleague, Leonard Woodcock, leader of the union's behemoth GM division, to run for governor against George Romney. Had Woodcock not been running for the vice-presidency inside the UAW, he would have taken the political bid.

There always is, of course, the great fraternity between Reuther and Bob Kennedy. They may not buck the President himself, but they may together fan out and fight for new Democrats to replace the old in the House and Senate.

Whatever it is that Walter Reuther is whipping together, it will be unveiled as the newest model in political action when the auto union meets next May in its Constitutional Convention.

It could be that Reuther will love the Johnsonians in November next as he did last May. But it could be the announcement of new political romances.

Mrs. Hobson Darney Brock, Jr.

Jane Ellen Lambert Marries Dr. Hobson Darney Brock Jr.

MEMPHIS-- The McClean Avenue Baptist church chapel was the scene Saturday afternoon at 4:30 p.m. for the wedding of Miss Jane Ellen Lambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Lambert of Sikeston, Mo. and Dr. Hobson Darney Brock, Jr., son of Mrs. Hobson Darney Brock and the late Dr. Brock of McComb, Miss.

Silver urns filled with white gladioli flaked the prie dieu and three tall branched candelabra formed the background for the double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Lloyd Barker.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Audley Brown of Charleston, who accompanied Louis Jones of Sikeston, vocal soloist, and also played the traditional wedding marches.

Miss Ann Waters of Sikeston and Miss Ann Barnwell of New Madrid, Mo., cousins of the bride, served as candlelighters. They wore moss green empire style floor-length gowns with matching bows in their hair and wristlets of yellow roses.

Mrs. Henry Coulon of Denver, Colo., cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Miss Charlotte Boyce, Miss Linda Ferguson, Miss Jane Ella Yount and Mrs. David Garner, all of Sikeston, were bridesmaids. The matron wore identical slim empire gowns of ivory ottoman enhanced by a banding of crocheted lace at the waist trimmed with moss green velvet ribbon. The lace and ribbon was repeated in an edging of honor and the bridesmaids at the wrist of the long sleeves and centered the panel down the back of the skirt. They carried bouquets of yellow roses and ivy.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a modified empire silhouette of ivory silk organza with full chapel-length train. Re-embroidered Alencon lace jeweled with pearls was appliqued over the bodice and extended in motifs down the front of the skirt. Her bridal veil of silk illusion was secured by a coutour pillbox of leaves and flowers. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias.

Dr. Brock chose his brother, John Brock of McComb, as best man. Groomsmen included Ralph Barnwell, Jr., of New Madrid, cousin of the bride; Dr. Jack Sanford of Covington, Ky., Dr. Richard Stout of Memphis and Dr. Luis Navarro of Caracas, Venezuela.

Mrs. Lambert, mother of the bride, wore a French blue costume suit heavily jeweled at the neckline, with veil and slippers to match. Mrs. Brock, mother of the groom, wore a pale blue suit with veil and cornflower blue. Both mothers wore white orchids.

The reception following the ceremony was held in the Red Room of the Top of the 100 Club. A satin brocaded bride's table held the four-tiered wedding cake, topped with a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath, flanked by silver candelabra. On either side of the bridal table were silver urns filled with white gladioli.

The serving table, a replica of the bride's table, was centered with a large silver angel epergne filled with white roses. Punch, mints, nuts and hot hors d'oeuvers were served to approximately 100 guests.

Miss Betty Ann Brown of Charleston attended the guest register. She wore a floor length moss green dress and a wristlet of yellow roses. Her younger sister, Miss Catherine Brown, distributed minature green rice bags to the guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Brock left for a wedding trip of undisclosed destination. Upon their return, they will be at home in Jackson, Miss., where Dr. Brock has established his practice.

REHEARSAL DINNER

Mrs. Hobson Darney Brock Sr. entertained Friday evening at a rehearsal dinner at the Embers for the Lambert-Brock bridal party and several guests.

One Down... Three To Go

BOSTON (AP) — While Lou Brock was concerned with shoulders and hips and feet, Carl Yastrzemski worried about hands.

The hands were beautiful on defense — as beautiful as they had been all year — but they didn't do anything for the Boston slugger when they held a bat, and that's what bothered him.

So, after Brock's record-tying four hits and two stolen bases plus Bob Gibson's six-hit pitching led St. Louis to a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox in the World Series opener Wednesday, Yastrzemski went back onto the field and took 20 minutes of batting practice.

He hoped the extra work would help for today's second game in which he would face Dick Hughes and the Cardinals would go against Jim Lonborg.

The American League's Triple Crown winner, who went hitless in four times at bat, spent a few minutes resting in the Boston clubhouse after the game, then changed uniforms and joined Ken Harrelson and Rico Petrocelli, who also had gone hitless, on the field.

"My hands were slow, real slow," Yastrzemski explained after emerging from the batting cage. "I wasn't using my hands enough, and I think I was dropping them a little too low."

Offensively, the opposing left fielders were a study in contrast.

Brock rapped four singles in his first four at-bats — he walked his last time up — stole second in the first and seventh innings and scored the Cardinals' runs, both times on grounders by Roger Maris.

That was enough to overcome a homer by pitcher Jose Santiago that tied the game in the third inning.

Yastrzemski, on the other hand, fouled out, grounded out and flied to Brock twice. Only in the field did he show the almost unbelievable skill that enables him to make the big plays and that sparked the Red Sox to their first pennant in 21 years. When Brock singled to left in the fourth with two out and Julian Javier on second base, he fired a perfect, no-bounce strike to Russ Gibson at the plate, and Javier was an easy out. When Curt Flood led off the next inning with a line drive that rose as it neared Yastrzemski, the left fielder raced over, leaped and snared the ball, averting a sure double or triple.

Those big plays, however, were not enough to overcome Yaz' lack of production at the plate. "If you're swinging the bat well and feel good like I did that last couple of weeks of the season, you'll hit anyone," he said. "But if you feel like I did today, my six-year-old son could get me out.

"If I'd hit a little we should have won today. We're still going to win the Series, though, and I can't wait until tomorrow."

Back in the Cardinal clubhouse, Brock was talking about the first game, the one that made the Cadinals even bigger favorites to win the series.

"All pitchers have flaws," Brock said, explaining the method that has made him the National League's base stealing champion the past two years. "I've never seen a pitcher that didn't have a flaw.

"The flaws fall into three categories— the shoulders, the hips and the feet. You take just one look at a pitcher, and you can tell what his flaw is. It doesn't matter who the pitcher is or whether you've seen him before or not.

"Santiago had a flaw, I spotted it right away."

Brock spotted it so quickly that he stole second in the first inning on Santiago's first pitch to the next batter, Curt Flood. After he singled in the seventh, he again stole on the first pitch to Flood.

He then moved to third as Flood grounded out and scooted home on Maris' grounder to second baseman Jerry Adair, who with the rest of the Boston infield was playing in close.

"Jerry didn't have any play at the plate," Boston manager Dick Williams said. "If the ball had been hit straight at him, it would have been different. But give Brock credit. He's a great runner."

That run wiped out the wholly unexpected blast that Santiago placed on top of the left-center field wall, about 360 feet away from home plate, in the third inning. That blow came on an 0-2 pitch.

"I hung a curve ball on him," Gibson said. "It was a bad pitch. I've made 'em before, and I'll make them again."

Gibson didn't make too many other bad pitches. Fully recovered from a broken leg suffered July 15, the fireballing right-hander struck out 10. In the Cardinals' last Series, in 1964, Gibson set a record by striking out 31 in 27 innings.

Besides Santiago, no other Red Sox advanced past second base, and only two got that far.

Besides the home run, Santiago had only one other thing to be happy about. He put down Orlando Cepeda, his friend from Puerto Rico, four straight times.

ROGER MARIS drove in both Cardinal runs in yesterday's first game of the World Series at the St. Louis National League pennant winners posted a 2-1 opening game victory at Boston against the Red Sox.

LOU BROCK, St. Louis Cardinal speedster and left handed slugger, tied a major league World Series record with four hits in four trips to the plate in yesterday's 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox. He stole second base twice and scored both Cardinal runs.

BOB GIBSON thwarted the Boston Red Sox and American League triple crown winner Carl Yastrzemski in yesterday's opening game of the World Series, winning 2-1. Gibson allowed only six hits and stuck out 10.

Unbeaten Tigers Take On Ohio State

COLUMBIA (AP) -- Missouri is facing an upset winner for the third straight week and the unbeaten Tigers figure to make it three in a row here Saturday, this time over Arizone, fresh from a 14-7 stunner at Ohio State.

A turnout of 48,000 is expected for the 1:30 p.m. CDT, kickoff.

The victory at Ohio State before 77,468 ranks as the foremost in Arizona football history because it's the first ever over a Big Ten team.

It's not as incredible as it seems. Ohio State is well below its glory days. But there was nothing freakish about the Arizona victory. The Wildcats did it with a fierce rushing game and solid defense. Bruce Lee, then the No. 2 quarterback, led his team to both touchdowns.

This is right down Missouri's alley, however. Coach Dan Devine has another sound, tough defensive club and the offense is much improved over last year's 6-3-1 club.

Gary Kombrink, a veteran quarterback, is the Big Eight total offense leader with 365 yards. He ran for 128 yards against SMU in a 21-0 victory. He passed for 132 and ran for 101 in a 13-6 victory at Northweseern.

Fullback Barry Lischner ripped the middle for 72 and 71 yards the first two games. Halfback Joe Staggers is a home run threat.

SMU opened with a nationally aflevsied 20-17 upset over Texas A&M. Northwestern knocked off nationally - ranked Miami of Florida.

At the Ohio State 9-yard line, Lee whispered only to Edmonds that he intended to keep it on a bootleg.

Ticket Scalpers Wanted By Police

ST. LOUIS (AP)— The assistant chief of detectives in St. Louis has come up with a deterrent against World Series ticket scalpers. Major John Doherty said Wednesday:

"Anyone who buys a World Series ticket from a scalper and will turn in the scalper's name to police, will have his money returned and be permitted to keep the tickets free of charge."

Doherty doubled his security detail against scalpers after reports came n that tickets were exchanging hands at a rapid rate. He reminded his men of the laws against scalping and instructed them to arrest anyone, "regardless of his station in life, who exchanges a World Series ticket for one cent more than the regular price."

Detroit Took Their Lumps, Bumps And Falls During Pennant Fight

By JOE FALLS
from The Sporting News

If you'll pardon the pronvincialism, I'd like to talk about my guys - the Tigers.

Now they aren't to be confused with the Daddy Dodgers or the Magnificent Mets. They're merely the Desperate Detroiters, but no team in modern times - and I assume Uncle Robbie, Babe Herman and all the boys from Brooklyn can be considered a part of modern times, even though some of their efforts were rather archaic - ever went through quite what my team went through this season.

As I wrote this, I have no idea whether the Tigers won the pennant or lost the pennant. But it really doesn't make much difference. This is a season they'll never forget.

The year 1967 will live in legend for the Desperate Detroiters.

What team in history ever lost one player with the mumps, another when he fell down the stairs at home, another when his foot went to sleep, another because of heart trouble, another because of a wholesale riot, another. . . well, this is why we call them the Desperate Detroiters.

If all started with Al Kaline's pinky.

It happened on the night of June 27 in Detroit. Things weren't going very well at the time, either for Kaline or the Tigers. The fans were on them pretty good and when Kaline struck out against Sam McDowell, he lost control of himself and slammed his bat into the rack in a violent fit of anger. His hand smashed against the bat rack and broke a pinky on his left hand.

Kaline was so embarrassed he remained away from the ball park for a few days. "I couldn't stand to face the guys," he said. "I've never been so embarrassed in my life."

His hand was placed in a cast and when he returned to the clubhouse, he tacked up a telegram next to his locker.

It said: "Nice going, stupid."

The telegram was signed: "Harmon Killebrew and Bob Allison."

But this was only the start for the Desperate Detroiters.

Jim Northrup was rocking along at a .300 clip when he got the mumps from his six-year-old son, James T. II. As the swelling came up, Northrup's average went down. He was out a week and it cost him his timing. . .And some of his strength. . .And as Northrup himself said: "I'm still not talking to the kid."

It was a fight for Northrup to stay in the .270s the rest of the way.

And Eddie Mathews - he took a day off early in September to visit his family in Milwaukee and proceeded to fall down 12 steps of stairs and bruise his body so badly he, too, was out for a week.

"It really happened, no kidding, honest," said Mathews with an embarrassed grin.

"Okay, if I'd been drinking, I wouldn't have got hurt," he said with a smile. His back and his hip were badly bruised. "I feel like I've been in a fight," he added.

And then there was Denny McLain and the curious case of the Sleeping Foot.

Denny got knocked out by the Red Sox on the night of September 18. On the morning of September 19, he telephoned the Tigers to tell them that he had dislocated a few of his toes on his left foot.

"You won't believe it but that's what happened," he said, crossing his heart. "I was sitting in the chair watching. "The Untouchables' on television when my foot went to sleep on me. When I went to get up, it caved in on me and I fell over."

That scratched Denny from any more starts.

Willie Horton hobbled throughout the entire season on a lame leg - a bone spur in his left heel. It bothered him so much he told his wife not to expect him home for dinner the night the season ended - he was going straight into the hospital for an operation.

Bill Freehan was hit by pitched balls no fewer than 19 times to establish a club record. It seemed like 18 of these HBP's were on his left forearm.

The Tigers got Don Demeter from Cleveland and he was going to be their righthanded-hitting first baseman and their No. 1 righthanded pinch - hitter, but Don came down with some circulatory trouble around his heart and never reported to the team. The deal was called off.

The Tigers lost Mickey Lolich when the city of Detroit was ravaged by the riots. The Mick is a member of the Michigan Air National Guard and he worked the streets for more than a week.

Ask Mayo Smith about it when you see him at the World Series. He'll tell you what it's been like managing these Desperate Detroiters.

Vikings Next Foe For Football Cards

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. - Looking for their third straight victory, the St. Louis Football Cardinals invade the northland this week, taking on the Minnesota Vikings at Metropolitan Stadium on Sunday.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. (CDT).

The Big Red's impressive, 38-28 victory over the Detroit Lions was cheering to everyone. The Cardinals spotted the Lions a pair of first-quarter touchdowns, stormed back to cut the lead to 21-17 at halftime, then poured it on in the second half.

Young Jim Hart, maturing with each game, led the Cardinals with 19 completions in 27 attempts for 313 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Even more significantly, on the Cardinals' five scoring drives, Hart completed 15 of 18.

John Roland had the biggest scoring day of his NFL career with three touchdowns, a pair on one-yard bursts and the third on a six-yard run.

Billy Gambrell and Jackie Smith were on the receiving end of Hart's touchdown passes, covering 48 and 57 yards, respectively, and Jim Bakken booted five conversions and a 39-yard field goal. It was the 14th consecutive game in which Bakken had kicked a field goal, matching an NFL record set by Cleveland's Lou Groza in the 1950-51 seasons. Bakken will have a chance to establish a new NFL standard this week.

The Vikings, under new coach Bud Grant, have dropped their first three games, two of them by narrow margins. They opened with a 27-21 loss to San Francisco, then were beaten by the Los Angeles Rams, 39-3, then lost to the Chicago Bears, 17-7, last Sunday.

Sunday will be the first of two straight road games for the Cardinals. They play the Cleveland Browns in Cleveland on October 15, before returning home for a pair of dates -- against the Philadelphia Eagles on October 22 and the Green Bay Packers on Monday night, October 30.

A-State Ranked Fourth

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Diego State Aztecs, solid leaders in The Associated Press' small-college football poll, will be seeking their 20th consecutive victory Saturday night when they meet Long Beach State.

The Aztecs will be heavily favored. Long Beach won its opener, 39-7 over California Poly at Pomona, but dropped the next two, 55-27 to San Francisco State and 35-25 to San Fernando Valley.

San Diego State was heavily favored again in the latest weekly balloting of sports writers and broadcasters on the AP's national panel. The Aztecs accumulated five votes for first-place and 118 points on a basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, nine for second etc. The leaders won their 19th in a row by beating California Poly of San Luis Obispo, 26-20, last weekend.

The Waynesburg, Pa. Yellow Jackets replaced Tennesse State in second place. Waynesburg advanced three positions after defeating Ohio Northern 48-13. Tennessee State slipped to eighth place, the result of a 14-10 setback by Texas Southern.

North Dakota State is third followed by Arkansas State, Northwestern Louisiana, Parsons and the University of Texas at Arlington.

Presbyterian, No. 9, and the University of Tennessee at Martin, No. 10, are the new teams in the rankings.

The top ten, with first place votes in parentheses and total points on a 10-9-8 etc. basis:

1. San Diego St. (5)	118
2. Waynesburg (1)	75
3. North Dakota St. (1)	69
4. Arkansas State (2)	60
5. Northwestern La. (1)	53
6. Parsons	41
7. Tex Arlington	35
8. Tenn. State	21
9. Presbyterian	14
10. Tenn. Martin (1)	13

ONE OF THE FINEST RICE CROPS in Missouri in many years is being harvested now in the area south of Poplar Bluff, Mo., in what is called the Bootheel. An unlikely crop for the Mid-West rice is a major commodity in the southeast corner of the state and an even larger business in neighboring Arkansas. Rice is under cultivation on about 4,000 acres of land in Missouri.

Rice Market Beckons Bootheel

By Bill Ellingsworth
Of the Kansas City Star

POPLAR BLUFF, MO. - First, it was the 4-ton combine that sank to a halt in the muck, Then a large tractor towing a grain hopper ground to a standstill, followed by another combine and a second grain hopper.

A massive, tandem-whelled tow-out tractor did its best to dislodge the various pieces of machinery, only to dig itself into a hole. Another tow-out tractor came, but its fan belt broke and it was useless.

At the final count, six pieces of farm machinery sat hub-deep (that's a tractor hub) in mud at various locations in the 100-acre field. It might at first seem foolish that these vehicles even ventured into such a field, but there was nothing unusual about the situation and George C. Norwood, co-owner of the land, summed it up by saying:

"This is rice farming."

The Missouri Bootheel land is a long way from the Orient and the equipment doesn't resemble anything you would fine in the stair-stepped rice paddies of China or Vietnam. But rice is still a big commodity in this area and for the last week, and for the next four weeks, the rice harvest will be in full swing.

There are about 4,000 acres of land here in the Bootheel that are devoted in the raising of rice, and when you are out sloshing around in the calf-deep water, it is difficult to imagine that you are really in Missouri.

One of the major producers of rice here is the Duncan-Norwood farm, owned by Wilburn Duncan and his brother-in-law, Norwood. For 14 years they have been growing nato rice, a mediun-grain rice, that is sold on the domestic market for a variety of uses. Much of the rice produced in this area is also earmarked for export.

Duncan was born on a rice farm in Arkansas, one of the major rice-producing states in the nation, and Norwood married Duncan's sister. Later, the business association began and, to date, has been a very successful union.

Rice farming is a hectic business, fraught with all types of problems. Once the rice seed is sown, the growing must be watched closely. Dikes must be constructed every few dozen feet and then water must be pumped during the growing season to irrigate the crop.

Once the rice grows to about two inches, water starts filling the dike-encircled areas.

Normally the water is drained about three weeks prior to harvest, but with three inches of rain in the area last week, farmers like Duncan and Norwood were forced to harvest wet.

"We'd prefer to harvest on dry ground," Duncan said "but the corp just won't wait for us. Once you have a rip crop you must get it out of the field or you have worked all year for nothing."

A big problem this year has been with blackbirds, who eat the grain.

On a modern farm, blackbirds are fought with technologically advanced tools. And Duncan, Norwood and Ray Thomas, who farms 318 acres, went after the birds in a way that the birds weren't expecting - by air.

"We equipped a small airplane with a high-powered siren and a bright red beacon," Norwood said. "And every night the pilot would swoop over the fields and scatter the birds. It's the best thing yet."

Cost Was $65

It cost an average of $65 an acre to bring the rice to the harvest stage. Chemicals were applied to keep down grass. The ground was fertilized and the airplane was used. All of this to produce a crop that should bring in excess of $2.25 a bushel and yield in the neighborhood of 125 bushels an acre.

Duncan, Norwood and Thomas are inpressed this year with the quality of their crop and feel that it is one of the best grown in the Bootheel area.

"This is good quality rice," Duncan said as he let some of the rough (unhusked) kernels slip through his fingers. "We were fortunate this year."

The government keeps a tight rein on the rice growers, and few of the farmers in the area have allotments much over 300 acres. However, the growers don't complain. They have a pretty strong organization themselves in the Arkansas Rice Growers Co-operative association, with headquarters in Corning, Ark., about 35 miles south of here.

Have Good Climate

The Bootheel and the Arkansas area have an ideal climate for rice, and because of this Arkansas is the second leading producer in the nation, next only to California. In Misouri, Duncan, Norwood and Thomas have the two leading allotments for a total of 628 acres.

Asked what the incentive is for raising rice, Duncan said the yield and the money are most definitely points of consideration, but added that the challenge is enticing too.

"You have to know what you are doing to raise rice," Duncan said. "You just don't plant it and harvest it...there is a lot to do in between times. No, I would have to day it is one of the most difficult crops in the world to raise properly."

The rice crop is rotated every year. This year the farmers are growing rice, next year they will switch to soybeans.

The farmers in this area begin harvesting about 11 o'clock each morning, after the dew has dried, and quit about 7 o'clock at night, or when the dew starts to form. They sell their crope, for the most part, to a packaging firm which markets the rice ready to cook.

Duncan, a local leader in soil conservation, does much traveling to conservation meetings throughout the country and, like many fellow farmers, takes samples of his crop to hand out.

"Everybody brings something to these meetings," he said. "Some bring potatoes or peaches or apples . . . I always take rice, and when I give it away the people look at it and ask me 'where did you say you were from? Not Missouri?' And I tell them that's right and they just can't believe that Missouri produces rice. Everybody thinks the Chinese have a corner on the market - it's not true."

AT A PRICE OF OVER $2.25 a bushel, the rice pouring into the hopper is a very profitable crop. The government keeps a tight rein on the amount of acreage that can be planted in rice in the Bootheel, but this year's yield will be about 125 bushels an acre. Dale Gorley, a farm hand, watches the rice shoot from the combine on the Duncan-Norwood farm.

A HEALTHY STAND of medium-grain rice was examined by the owners of the Duncan-Norwood farms, Wilburn Duncan (right), and George C. Norwood. The men spend many hours a day in the fields from May to October nursing the rice along. They say that while the final yield is worth the price, rice is a demanding crop to raise.

House Stands Firm for Cut In Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House emphasizes its determination to show President Johnson it means to see spending cut before taxes are raised— it passes that message to the Senate.

The House refused Wednesday, 226 to 173, to consider a $3 billion noney bill for the Labor Department and Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The reason: the Senate approved more spending than the President proposed for the two departments.

The action means a House-Senate conference committee must meet again to see if it can come up with a version satisfactory to the Senate and the economy-minded House.

Tuesday the House Ways and Means Committee set aside Johnson's bill for a 10 per cent income tax surcharge until there is concrete evidence that spending in this fiscal year will be slashed by $5 billion.

The House did vote Wednesday for a temporary appropriations bill financing until Oct. 23 several agencies which haven't received their annual money allotments yet. House Republicans made clear that further temporary measures would be opposed unless the $5 billion spending cut is assured.

Chairman George Mahon, D.Tex., whose Appropriations Committee may wind up proposing most of the spending cuts, said he wanted to know "whether the economy drive is skin deep or bone deep."

Pointing to a dilemma bound to arise when decisions on spending cuts are made, Mahon noted that Rep. Garner E. Shriver, R.Kan., didn't approve a spending reduction in the Labor-Welfare bill for aid to schools in defense installation areas.

Shriver explained this provision would affect his home state.

"The gentleman from Kansas is wanting to practice economy but not in his own district," Mahon said. "I must say we are all a little like that."

Many House members, especially Republicans, want Johnson to guarantee cuts before Congress appropriates. The administration argues Johnson can't cut until he knows exactly how much money he has to work with.

PUBLISHER LEASES THEATER

NEW YORK (AP) — A firm which first specialized in play publishing, then bought a weekly program service is now going into stage production.

"It seemed a natural step," says Barney Rosset, head of Grove Press.

A 10-year lease has been taken on off-Broadway's 162-seat Renata Theater. Slated for presentation are works by avant-garde and youthful writers which might otherwise be overlooked.

Rosset some months ago moved into theatrical activity by taking over the printing of playbills for off-Broadway shows.

FRESH AUDIENCES

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Theater activity is being encouraged here because the regional population keeps changing.

Elliot Martin, managing director of productions at two playhouses in the Music Center, reports that "there's a 20 per cent turnover every six months" in lists used to mail out notices to potential showgoers.

"The result," he says, "is that there's a constant segment of potential new audience arriving, and less chance of a decline in interest which is a problem in some communities."

EARLY OPTIMISM

NEW YORK (AP)—Before even arriving on Broadway, the Jewish National Theater of Poland is extending its engagement.

Originally booked for six weeks, the management rearranged the tour schedule so that two more weeks could be added.

Harold Leventhal, sponsor of the visit with Marie Desmarais, said the change was made because the Polish government was impressed with the strong advance ticket sale.

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) — A private concern is restoring to its original appearance the house where Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The novel was credited with crystalizing opinion just before the Civil War. A $400,000 motel is being erected behind the Stowe house, a far cry from Uncle Tom's place.

War Issue Splitting Ranks in Both Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential campaign, reaching a climax exactly one year from now, will be a mess for both parties if nothing changes in the war in Vietnam or in the public attitude toward it at home.

President Johnson, with his Democrats split on the war and public support for it dwindling, may not only have a tough time getting reelected but even renominated.

Republicans are split on the same subject. Just this week Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, Republican Senate leader who has steadfastly backed Johnson's Vietnam policy, rebuked Republicans he thought were too harsh on Johnson.

Those Republicans being mentioned as their party's likely presidential candidate are divided, too.

Last March, Johnson and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D.N.Y., widened their differences when the atter called for a bombing halt in Vietnam and Johnson said continuing the air strikes was imperative. Kennedy hasn't said much about it since.

While he denies presidential ambitions in 1968 and has publicly pledged support for Johnson, Kennedy has been gaining, and Johnson declining in public opinion polls on preference about the two men's candidacy.

This week the Gallup Poll showed 51 per cent of those quizzed favored Kennedy to 39 per cent for Johnson. Meanwhile, Johnson has been persistently belabored about the war by Democrats in Congress.

If there is no change in the war by October, 1968, Democrats will have a tormented time reconciling t eir differences. There will have to be some extraordinary flip-flops if the party hopes to look united.

But Republicans can read the polls. Some of them already have done some flip-flopping, an exercise which could be very convenient if public opinion on the war gets worse.

The No. example is Michigan's Gov. George Romney who for most of 1965 solidly backed Johnson on the war after a trip to Vietnam earlier that year. He began to get more restrained and vague before the year's end.

Then he was on-again-off-again. Earlier this year he was saying the 1968 presidential candidate with the best chance for election will be the one who convinces voters he can achieve peace "at a reasonably early date."

But when he reached the point of saying he had been "brainwashed" by government officials on his trip to Vietnam his standing in the polls started down.

New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, denying any intention of being a candidate, had supported Romney but his ratings in the polls steadily went up and this week the Gallup Poll had a new finding.

This was it: of those questioned, 55 to 41 per cent favored a Republican ticket led by Rockefeller and California's Gov. Ronald Reagan to a Democratic ticket with Johnson and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Maybe it was only a coincidence, but almost at the very moment this poll was disclosed Rockefeller, who had broadly supported Johnson's Vietnam policy, was reported saying privately he was shifting toward a more moderate position and was no longer wholeheartedly behind Johnson.

Asked about this later, he declined comment by saying he had said nothing about it and woouldn't.

Reagan, a tough-liner on Vietnam, may be becoming a little more restrained, judging from recent statements of his, but not much. Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, whom the GOP's political pros like, has taken and stood by a hard line. In a recent interview he warned his fellow-contenders for the Republican nomination not to run on a platform of 'peace at any price."

And this week, Dirksen, without naming names, cautioned some of his fellow Republican Senators who have been most caustic about Johnson not to demean him for it means demeaning the "prestige of the republic." Dirksen has been steadfast in support of Johnson on the war.

EDA Hopes to Correct Rural Jobless Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government-business program aims to create industrial employment near home for jobless slumdwellers. But meanwhile an existing agency is working to keep the rural jobless from migrating to slums in the first place.

It tries to guide them to areas where work is available and visualizes a national job placement service.

The Economic Development Administration, set up two years ago as part of the Commerce Department, still isn't looking for overnight success.

Ross D. Davis, assistant secretary of commerce for economic development, said EDA programs are aimed at helping lagging areas reduce unemployment and increase incomes.

"The corollary must be that we will help stem and reverse the tide of migration that takes people to places where there are no jobs," he added.

EDA's Office of Policy Coordination said the flow of migrants from rural areas must be redirected to the medium and small-size cities where most new jobs are being created.

The plan involves job counseling, a comprehensive employment service and job retraining. Officials call the present federal-state employment service inadequate.

They want a network of employment services where jobs can be pinpointed throughout the nation and persons trained and directed to them.

This, officials said, will require a basic restructuring of the present employment service to provide data on jobs available not just locally but in many areas in the country.

EDA officials described as startling the projections it made for the growth of jobs in metropolitan areas.

Very small and very large areas, they said, will produce comparatively few new jobs in the future. The major growth will come in counties with a population ranging from 50,000 to 500,000 persons.

But unemployed persons from rural areas tend to concentrate in the big cities, officials said, where they feel the number of job alternatives are larger.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

We would like to thank you for your continuing interest in the schools of our community. The newspaper coverage of the Adult Basic Education Courses of study have been of great help to us in informing the public of the work of the school in the area of adult education.

Sincerely yours,
H. Wade Bedwell

Dear Editor:

I would appreciate it if you will print the poem enclosed as a tribue to one of the best of men my husband, W. C. Zimmer.

Memories

Fourteen (14) years ago dear,
many miles away.
We pledge our love forever, it was our wedding day.
For me years of contentment
For you I know the same
I'm thankful you are mine dear
And proud to bear your name.
You make my life worth living
With the comforts you provide
I'll ever more be grateful to have you by my side.
Happy anniversary love
You deserve the best in life
I loved you then, I love you now

Series Cops High TV Rating

NEW YORK (AP) — Real baseball fans have a tendency to scoff at the capacity crowds that turn out for World Series games, contending that most of the people are there— and a lot of them occupying the best seats— just because it is a spectacle, not for love of the game.

The spectacle-lovers apparently abandon their soap operas and game shows in television, too, at World Series time, since a quick Nielsen check of the metropolitan New York area audience during Wednesday's opening game showed that 65 per cent of all sets in use were turned in on NBC's report of the goings-on in Boston.

The network concentrated lots of cameras, plenty of experts and statisticians for the opening game and acquitted itself handsomely. The color was good, the commentators restrained themselves from gabbing when the action slowed down. But the game itself was pretty much of a pitching duel which enchants the baseball fans but can be a bit of a drag for the World Series-watcher who can take baseball or leave it alone— and really prefers the latter.

What we nonfans enjoy is plenty of hitting and sliding and howling from the audience. When its mostly pitching, the game seems to move as slowly as the plot of a day-time serial.

Another of the quickie Nielsen reports on national viewing preferences— this one covering the week of Sept. 18— shows that the public still prefers feature film broadcasts to anything else on the television schedules. Five of the movie nights landed in the list of the 10 most popular programs.

Top show of the week was Rock Hudson-Doris Day film "Send Me No Flowers," on NBC, and CBS's broadcast of "The Apartment" was in third place. Among television programs— not including broadcasts of old movies— in the top 10 list were CBS's "Gomer Pyle" and "Andy Griffith Show," NBC's "Bonanza" and the "Bob Hope Comedy Special" and "CBS's "Lucy Show."

On the bottom of the list were NBC's Telephone Hour— low show among 80 rated. Others in the bottom five were ABC's "Good Company," CBS's News Hour, ABC's "Legend of Custer" and "Hollywood Palace," and NBC's "Accidental Family."

NEW YORK (AP)—Ordered to disband and return to street cleaning and refuse collection, the Sanitation Department Band decided to play on.

The sanitation commissioner directed the 56-member band's swan song because of a severe manpower shortage in keeping the city clean. But the bandsmen, with the help of Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky, have booked themselves to play concerts for teenagers.

"They are doing this on their own time, free of charge," Stavisky said.

Meanwhile, City Councilman Frank X. Smith has mounted Operation Band Aid, an effort to keep the official departmental band intact.

Peru, Argentina May Buy Arms

NEW YORK (AP) - Two Latin American nations, overriding objections by the United States, are moving to buy modern arms from France, The New York Times reported.

The most significant sale is for 12 Mirage V fighter-bombers to Peru and the other involves the sale of 50 AMX - 30 tanks to Argentina, the newspaper said in a dispatch from Washington.

U.S. diplomats have been applying strenous pressure on Peru not to buy the supersonic jets out of fear that it might trigger a Latin American arms race, The Times said.

The report quoted U.S. State Department sources as saying conversations still were going on between the U.S. and Peru, but added that Peru already had signed a contract to purchase the planes from Marcel the French aircraft manufacturer.

It's true that swimmers cannot sink in the Great Salt Lake, but they do risk choking for the water is eight times saltier than the ocean.

Army Using BB Guns to Develop No-Aim Skill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is using BB guns to develop a soldier's skill at doing something a Western gunfighter reputedly did instinctively: hit a spinning dime in midair without aiming.

The no-aim technique has been dubbed "quick kill" and the Army says it is just the thing to use when suddenly confronted with a pop-up target or an enemy soldier in Vietnam.

And a BB gun, the same kind junior uses, is the easiest and quickest tool to get the point across, the Army says.

The principle behind "quick kill" is that when a person points his finger at something, the object, his finger and his eye fall into perfect alignment. The Army is attempting to make a soldier's rifle an extension of his pointing finger.

Researchers have given rats ulcers and literally driven them crazy with loud sounds.

Montana Boy Scouts Get Own Ghost Town

LEWISTOWN, Mont. (AP) — About 500 boys have been given their own chunk of the Old West— a crumbling ghost town in Montana's North Moccasin Mountains.

Lewistown resident Glenn Morton, who for years had been buying portions of an abandoned town site in hopes of preserving it, first offered half of the original community of Kendall, north of Lewistown, to the State of Montana. When Montana officials declined his offer, Morton found an enthusiastic recipient in the North-Central Montana Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

The town is about to return to life. Wielding most of the tools the city's pioneer settlers used to search for gold, the youths will attack the dormant town, cleaning streets, resetting foundations, oiling doors and splashing a new coat of paint over cracked lumber.

"The boys aren't the only ones excited about the town," said Beryl Morris, Great Falls scout executive. "I think the prospect of owning a ghost town has revealed some of the 'boy at heart' among us adults."

Morris said plans for the area will be aimed at preserving its historical significance. "The boys will turn each of the old streets into trails with the same names they had when Kendall was a booming community," he said.

Right now Kendall is asleep. But the fever that drew 1,400 prospectors and their families, and the disillusionment that caused them to vacate the town are still there. The old feelings are still hidden in the depths of a concrete bank vault which was emptied of its last gold shipment when paydirt began to run scarce just after the turn of the century.

Morton, assured that his town now is in good hands, asks only that none of the stone ruins be torn down or dismantled. Retired, he is content to relax and watch a church become once more a church; to watch the city wells cleaned and once again yielding cold pure water, and most of all, to watch 500 boys bring youth to a city that was dying of old age.

Racing Rabbi Meets Teeners On Own Level

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The rabbi told his father he was a drag racer and Dad said he thought being a rabbi was enough, "He didn't believe it was necessary for me to take additional risks."

Rabbi Robert Schectman, 28, of Beth El Temple tools around Springfield in a white souped-up 1966 Mustang called "Heavenly Hauler" which, he says, speaks louder to teen-agers than his sermons.

"I have been able to show these teen-agers that a religious person is a real person," he says. "To be religious doesn't mean that one must be withdrawn."

The rabbi is about as withdrawn as A.J. Foyt. His car can accelerate to 100 m.p.h. in 14 seconds and so far he's won drag competition in Colchester, Conn., and Lebanon, N.Y.

As he purrs around Springfield, he gets challenges from almost anybody on wheels. Rabbi Schectman tells them, "Sir, come down to the drag strip and I'll race you, not in the street."

The rabbi's pit crew comprises two Jews— Larry and David Solomon, 15-year-old twins— and a Roman Catholic, Peter Ford, 17.

The rabbi told his father, Rabbi Harry Schectman of Kingston, N.Y., not to worry about the risks of drag racing.

To the younger Schectman, drag racing is a part of the world created for man by God.

"The Jewish law directs man to enjoy life and to express an interest in many things and it also teaches us to develop skills to improve mankind," he says.

"To be able to use the power developed in the car is a way of asserting mastery of nature," he says. "There is the accomplishment of having made natural forces do what I, man, want."

Ford's Theater To Reopen After 102-Year Period

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford's Theater, its stage empty since President Abraham Lincoln was fatally shot while watching a play there 102 years ago, soon will echo anew the sounds of live theater.

The Interior Department said Wednesday that 1860-era plays will be presented at Ford's beginning early next year. The Ford's Theater Society, a nonprofit group, hopes to have a repertory group presenting a nine-month season beginning next Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday.

Announcement of the undertaking, helped along by a $250,000 grant from Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., came from Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall at a news conference in the partially refurbished theater six blocks from the White House.

Ford's has been closed to tourists since the Interior Department began in 1965 a $2.7 million restoration.

Backstage is still a tangle of scaffolding and wiring but the theater interior already exudes the aura of that day— April 14, 1865— when Lincoln was shot by actor John Wilkes Booth.

Separate cotton lace and damask curtains decorate the box where Lincoln and his wife sat watching a comedy, "Our American Cousin."

On the orchestra floor are replicas of the cane-bottomed chairs used at the time. Two curving balconies are partially equipped with the type of long benches on which patrons sat.

Ornate carvings on the balcony facades, winding slate-step staircases and wall and balcony candelabra— all reproduced from photos taken after the assassination— also are in place.

There also are some differences.

The theater will seat only 600 instead of the 1,700 it did in Lincoln's day. Udall explained the cutback involved stricter fire regulations and "the fact we found that people of this age require broader seats.

Also changed— and hopefully improved, said Udall— will be the theater's acoustics and backstage equipment.

McDonough Joins Copter Company

TAY NINH,--Army First Lt. Ranney W. McDonough, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walton R. McDonough, Morley, Mo., has been assigned to the 187th assault helicopter company near Tay Ninh, Vietnam.

McDonough, a rotary wing aviator, entered the army in August of 1966 and was last stationed at Ft. Rucker, Ala.

A 1961 graduate of Scott County Central high school, Morley, Mo., he was graduated from the University of Missouri at Rolla, Mo., in 1966 with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering.

He received his commission through the reserve officers' training corps program at the University.

His wife, Anna, lives at 327 Illinois Ave., Sikeston, Mo.

Court Petition Form Approved

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson has approved the form of a petition calling for an election on extending Missouri's nonpartisan court plan to St. Louis County.

Now the plan applies only to the appellate courts, the courts of Jackson County and St. Louis city.

The petition calls on St. Louis County election officials to put the court plan proposal on the ballot in the August primary election next year.

Under provisions of a bill passed by the 1967 legislature, opening the questions to the county's voters, the petition must have the valid signatures of legal voters equal to at least 5 per cent of the total vote cast in the last election for governor.

The attorney general also told Gene E. Voights, Clay County prosecutor, that a county may issue bonds for park purposes even though cities in the county already are taxing for parks.

State Auditor Haskell Holman was advised by the attorney general's office that a county school superintendent may not take pay from an individual school in the county. Anderson held that it is against public policy to give a public officer additional pay for performing official duties. He said it would be a conflict of interest.

The question was brought up by the auditor regarding approval by the school board of the R-4 district in Ripley County for a payment of $900 a year to the county superintendent.

Dear Mr. Blanton:
R. C. Martin says:

Any nation that practices the philosophy that one segment of that nation's society owes another segment of its society a living cannot long endure as a free nation.

This philosophy is against the laws of God. The Bible has never endorsed a doctrine of taking from a productive man and giving to the none productive.

There is a hidden nature in man that can never be satisfied. The more he has the more he wants. This also holds true to the recipients of charity. Try to satisfy the wants of the none productive and you will bankrupt the nation.

Sincerely,
R. C. Martin

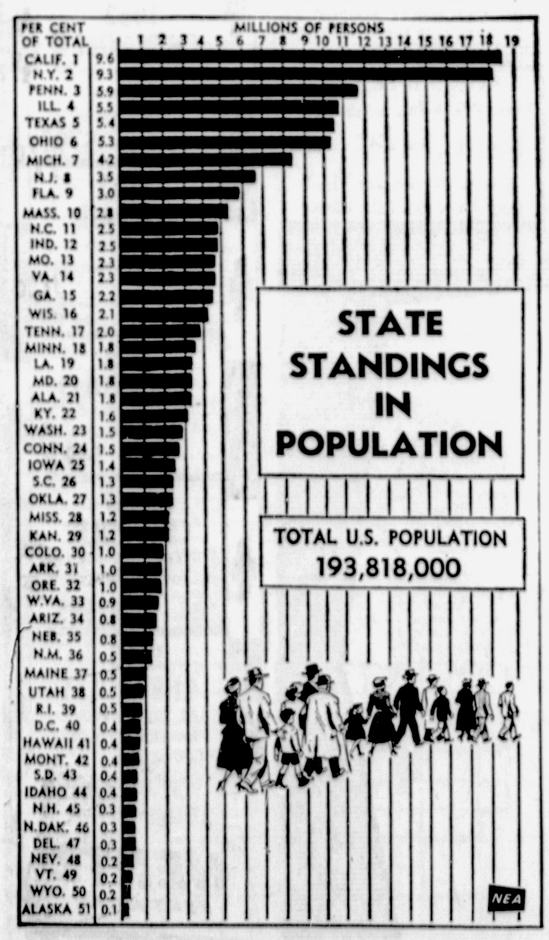
PARDON, MISS, but . . . Gussie Moran, who shocked the tennis world with her lace shorts several years ago, had nothing on Virginia Wade of Great Britain as she bent over to pick up a dropped racket during the United States National Tennis Tournament at Forest Hills, N.Y.

THE PORCUPINE LOOK seems to be in vogue for Elizabeth Taylor as she and her husband Richard Burton arrive at a masked ball at Rezzonico Palace in Venice. Celebrities from all over the world attended the ball, most extraordinary social event of the year, which raised around $30,000 for victims of last year's flood. The arrival of guests by gondola up the Grand Canal caused the world's most serious nautical traffic jam.



Though population in the United States has grown to nearly 200 million since the 1965 figures above were compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Census, state standings have shown little change from those shown here. California remains the leader in numbers, while Alaska, biggest in size, observes the centennial of its relationship with the United States with the smallest number of residents.

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MISSOURI
Resolution

A resclution declaring the necessity for the construction of concrete curb and gutters on Benton Street from Warner Street to East Street, in accordance with plans and specifications, in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $1.65 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy fo this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 2nd day of October 1967. Approved: Kendall Sikes, Mayor; Attest: John W. Vaughn, City Clerk.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

Our school, or any other school for that matter, could likely count itself successful if we taught our students to read well and to acquire the desire to read or a habit of reading. None of the other skills which we teach are quite so important.

We make every effort to teach reading. The subject is given more attention than any other and generally most of our students learn to read reasonably well. The reading program is perhaps most intense at the beginning level, i.e.: first graders, and our teachers try to use the latest methods and materials. Our observation is that our elementary teachers do an exceptionally good job with this important subject. Reading above the elementary level, is no less important but is more on an incidental basis in that the student reads to acquire information relating to other subjects. Some reading is taught at the secondary level for those students who have more than usual difficulty. They are given a concentrated dose, using special techniques and equipment, some of the devices referred to as teaching machines as they aid the student to increase reading speed and comprehension.

Obviously students can't read unless there is material to read. More than normal attention has been given to our schools' libraries, this department being capably lead by Fred Huff, Director of Library Services; and Polly Hanks, librarian at Middle School and elementary principals and teachers given this responsibility at the elementary level.

According to an announcement which we got today from Fred Huff, there will be a special exhibit of books for junior and senior high school readers at the Senior High School library Monday, October 23 through Friday, October 27. The exhibit, representing 63 leading publishers and including several university presses, will be open daily from 7:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M., closing at noon on Friday. Students, teachers, librarians, parents and interested adults are urged to review the exhibit of 430 of the best and most recent books for the seventh to twelfth grade level.

The exhibit includes both fiction and nonfiction and there are books to enthrall, inform and instruct. Orders for those desiring copies can be made. The school does not profit, this is merely an added service through are library department. Naturally we are interested in helping to bring as much good reading material into the community as possible.

Next week, October 4-14 is Fire Prevention Week. Through the cooperation of Sikeston's effective fire department, special attention will be given to fire prevention education during the week. Incidentally, the fire stations will conduct "Open House during the week and all citizens are invited to visit with them. Regular fire drills are conducted in all of the schools and especially those where there is some degree of hazard in which case the drills are more frequent.

We are in receipt of a letter from Governor Warren Hearnes, sent out to all schools, calling attention to a state program designed to assist the 14,000 or so students, who unfortunately drop out of Missouri's schools each year. The proposed program is an arrangement whereby the Missouri State Employment Service is to be informed each time there is a school drop out. The employment service will then work with the drop out to suggest alternate courses of action, for example: a job, if this is possible, (and for the drop out it usually isn't), Manpower Training, Neighborhood Youth Corps, Job Corps or other means of completing his education and developing marketable skills. While the Board of Education attempts here to provide a program which will as nearly fit the needs of each student, with heavy emphasis on vocational education and has very appreciably reduced our drop out rate, even one drop out is a problem. The student who drops out of school without further education, as is suggested through the Governor's program, has two strikes against him. Usually he has not done well in school. (Sometimes this is as much the fault of the school as it is the fault of the drop out). He does not have marketable skills. He then joins the unemployed, or at best the under employed. Worse yet, he may become a social or legal problem as a result of his inability to find a job or to be successful in life. Attention to the potential drop out or the drop out at that particular point is extremely important. The use of more than an average amount of the taxpayers' funds to prevent the drop out or to further his education through some other channel can be a very wise expenditure. We commend the Governor for this program.

Former Oklahoma football coach, Bud Wilkinson, who later served as Physical Fitness Consultant to the late President Kennedy, charges that "Too many schools use a successful varsity team as a smoke screen for poor physical education programs." While we don't believe this is generally true, certainly some schools are inclined to give undue attention to the more glamorous sport program than they are to providing programs of physical fitness for all children. The general public is not without blame. We have noted that some citizens, even parents of school children, are more concerned about the success of the baseball, basketball or football teams than they are about the quality of the educational program which is provided for children. We can't remember much hue and cry to fire a mediocre English or mathmetics teacher but this is frequently the case when a coach has a losing season.

Boards of Education should provide a well-planned and executed program of physical fitness for every child according to his need. Special attention should be given to those children who are least physically fit or who have physical handicaps. Then programs of competitive sports, planned to involve as many students as are interested, should be on top of this. The student who has unusual ability or interest in athletics should have the opportunity to develop his interests and abilities just as the school should provide an intellectually challenging opportunity to the student with above average intelligence. But we would agree with Wilkinson, "the tail shouldn't wag the dog." Both physical education, for all, and a sound athletic program are important.

As information to parents who may wish to make medical or dental appointments or to plan a trip, we note here that school will be dismissed Thursday and Friday, November 2 and 3, for the annual Missouri State Teachers Association Convention to be held in St. Louis. School is dismissed when the state meeting is held in St. Louis, as it is every other year, in order that our teachers may attend this important professional meeting. On alternate years it is held in Kansas City and because of the distance, we do not dismiss school for the Kansas City meeting, as only a few of our faculty attend as delegates.

Ann Landers

Mother Asks Daughter to Approve Extra Marital Sex

Dear Ann Landers: My mother and I are only 18 years apart in age. She could easily pass for my older sister. Although I am only 16, I understand a lot about life and everyone says I am very mature for my age.

Recently my mother told me that Dad has lost all interest in sex. She says she is getting nervous and doesn't know what to do about it. Mom has asked my advice and I don't know what to tell her. She says there is a very nice, attractive man who works in the same office with her. He is married but does not care for his wife. Do you think it would be terrible if my mother got together with this man so they could fill out the empty spots in one another's lives? -- NO ANN LANDERS

Dear No: A mother who would discuss this problem with her daughter (even if they do look like sisters) has some loose parts in her head. It sounds as if she is looking to you for approval, not advice.

Tell your mother to seek professional counseling and to please leave you out of it. It's bad enough for a teen-ager to know that her mother is a swinger. To ask a child to be a party to such crummy business is too much.

Dear Ann Landers: I have something to say to all kids who are fed up with school and think they would be better of if they quit and got a job. The best way to get my idea across is to ask you to print this letter:

"Dear John Doe, Jr.: I am sorry I had to turn you down this afternoon when you came to my office and applied for a job. Judging from the "so what?" expression on your face, I suspect you have been turned down before. Probably dozens of times.

"You seemed like a nice enough young man, neat and polite and willing, but you didn't have a high school diploma. I know you can read because you came to my office in response to an ad which appeared in the paper. Apparently you skimmed over the line which read, 'High-school Graduates.'

"The job you wanted has an excellent future. It offered unusual opportunities for advancement. I am sorry you didn't qualify. And now I would like to give you one bit of advice. Go back to school and graduate. That diploma is far more important than the car you are supporting. And, young man, if you can possibly go on to college, GO! You may feel it is a waste of time, but take my word for it, it is the smartest thing you can do. The world is changing and those who are not equipped to meet the new challenges will be left behind. Good luck -- THE MAN WHO HAD TO SAY NO"

Dear Man: I hope your message sinks into hundreds of thousands of skulls around the country. And now may I grab the tail of the kite and add a word of my own?

I have never had a letter from a reader saying he was sorry he stayed in high school and graduated, but I have had stacks of mail from dropouts begging me to get the word to other teen-agers for whom it is NOT too late. The word is, "Stay in school and graduate or you may find yourself hopelessly trapped in a dull, low-paying job for life."

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze and You-For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were The Judge

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Three-fingered Tom had a long standing feud with Four-fingered Freddy. Instead of burying the hatchet, however, Tom decided to bury Freddy. Consequently, when he found him lying in peaceful repose on a couch one afternoon, he took advantage of the opportunity to pump five slugs into Freddy's back.

As it turned out, however, Tom had wastefully squandered his five bullets. For, when the coroner subsequently submitted his report, it revealed that Tom had inconsiderately died at least an hour before the shooting from natural causes.

Undaunted by the report, a determined district attorney nevertheless charged Tom with attempted murder.

"The D.A.'s crazy," Tom protested in court. "Freddy was already dead when I let him have it. Since you can't kill a corpse, I can't be convicted to attempting the impossible."

"The unfortunate state of Freddy's health at the time he was shot," retorted the district attorney, "has nothing to do with the case. What is important is that Tom intended to commit murder. And, he made the attempt. He was foiled by the fickle finger of fate. Therefore, he's guilty."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Tom of attempted murder?

This is how the Judge ruled: No! The Judge held that that it is no crime to attempt to murder a corpse since a corpse cannot be murdered. (Based upon a 1953 Springfield Court of Appeals, Missouri, Decision)

The Prayer

From the Upper Room

We were all brought into one body by baptism. . . and that one Holy Spirit was poured out for all of us to drink. (I Corinthians 12:13, NEB)

PRAYER: Most merciful Creator and Lord, forgive our trespasses and manifest unto us Thine eternal love. Help us realize that we can attain a blessed life if we put our trust in Thee. This we pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

MOTHERS HANDS ON PLOUGH

NEW DELHI (AP) — Women in rural India are going to learn the latest scientific agricultural methods.

The southern state of Madras has led the way by starting a one-week course training about 80 women at a time in better farming methods.

Mrs. Sraojini Varadappan, chairman of the Madras State social welfare board, who is conducting the course, said it was time women took up the challenge of India's chronic foodgrain deficiency.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, and it is time our hands are put to the plough," she said.

Oct. 5, 1947

Funeral services for William R. Decker, a retired farmer, were held yesterday afternoon at the Baptist Church in Smith Addition.

The widening of East Center street and the placing of an area in the east part of Sikeston into the business district were included in actions taken last night by the city council in a regular monthly meeting. An ordinance was adopted placing all of that area from Moore avenue east to Lillian Drive and from Linn street north to a public alley, in the business district.

After 25 years on the Sikeston fire department, Milburn Arbaugh last night resigned as chief of the local department and his resignation was accepted by the city council.

Doyle Lackey, Forest Lackey, John Hodges and Leo Parks returned Sunday from Pala Camp, Minaki, Ont., Canada, after a successful two weeks hunting trip. Each man is credited with a deer and both Doyle and Forest Lackey killed a bear.

Lawyer Calls on U.S. to Improve Freedom Image

ST. LOUIS (AP)— The wealth of America is being created because of individual freedom, a Kansas lawyer told a Girl Scout group in St. Louis. He advised them to carry that message to the rest of the world and improve the American image.

Richard F. Hrdlicka, Hesston, Kan., was the keynote speaker Tuesday at the Region 8 Girl Scout conference.

He told the group that the people of the world are overwhelmed by the promotion of wealth in the United States and consequently do not hold the U. S. as "a bright, shining example of liberty."

Hrdlicka is a refugee from Czechoslovakia. He fled from behind the Iron Curtain in 1948.

Stone Promoted To Lieutenant Colonel

CHARLESTON -- Marshall Stone has been promoted to lieutenant colonel in the army reserve.

Stone, an infantry officer, began his military career by enlisting in headquarters company, 140th infantry, Missouri National Guard in 1936.

While serving three years active duty during World War II, Stone was commissioned in the army air corps as a bombardier - navigator assigned to the 47th bomb group.

After separation from active service, Stone accepted a commission in the national guard. He transferred to the army reserve in 1956.

Colonel Stone and his wife, Montell, live at 305 North Locust St.

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Oct. 5, the 278th day of 1967. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1954, Italy and Yugoslavia formally settled their dispute over the city of Trieste.

On this date—

In 1502, Columbus discovered Costa Rica.

In 1830, the 21st American president, Chester A. Arthur, was born.

In 1881, painter Pablo Picasso was born in pain.

In 1918, the allies announced that the Hindenburg Line had been broken during World War I.

In 1921, the baseball world series was broadcast by radio for the first time. The plays were described by sports writer Grantland Rice.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman asked Americans limit consumption of meat, eggs and poultry to build up a stockpile of grain for Europe.

Ten years ago — The Soviet Union disclosed that the satellite Sputnik 1 had passed over or near most of the world's major cities.

Five years ago — The United States completed a military withdrawal from Laos in accordance with an agreement ending a civil war there.

One year ago — The White House acknowledged that the United States was bombing the eastern sector of the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam.

$169,721, Paid Out for Welfare

A total of $169,720.84 was paid to 2,186 cases on the Scott county welfare roles during September, Mrs. Cathleen Gipson, county welfare director, reports.

The highest amount went for old age assistance, with 1,257 cases receiving $86,935 or $69.16 per case. Fifty-six cases received $5,402.84 in old age assistance nursing care and vendor payments, $94.87 per case.

The aid to dependent children role had 433 cases with 1,388 children receiving $46,392 or $107.14 per case and $33.43 per child.

General relief had 185 cases with 210 persons receiving $12,722, or $68.77 per case and $60.58 per person.

The 215 cases on the permanent and total disability role received $15,069 or $70.09 per case.

Thirty-nine cases received aid to the blind payments totaling $3,120 or $80 per case, and one case received a blind pension totaling $80.

Of the 123 children receiving child welfare services, 52 were protective services, 32 foster home care and 39 services were given to adoptive and unmarried mothers and supplementary services.

Codell, Kan., was hit by tornadoes in three successive years—1916, 1917 and 1918—and each tornado occurred the same day, May 20.

checks for $5,000 and $10,000 and putting the balance in her checking account.

That day, they said, Mrs. Shearer and her husband Albert, a used car salesman, went to an automobile agency in La Habra and got a 1968 car for $3,700. The car was picked up the next day in return for a $5,000 cashier's check.

A day later, the Shearers returned to pick up a $1,300 check representing their change.

"The couple said they won the $5,000 at the races," a car salesman said.

Then Albert and Jaynee Shearer went to Las Vegas, Nev., for the weekend.

Only $5,000 or so of the $19,065 could be recovered, the district attorney's office said Wednesday.

The county auditor's office discovered the computer's error and issued a stop-payment order. The car was confiscated with only 28 miles on the speedometer.

Mrs. Shearer was quoted by investigators as saying she didn't know what the check was for and that, after she cashed it, she gave the balance of the money to her husband.

Shearer was quoted as saying only that he has none of the money now.
